AUSTRIAN ARMY ENTERED BELGRADE ON WEDNESDAY

Heavy Bombardment Reduced Famous Old Forts to Ruins before Invaders Crossed the Danube on Pontoon Bridge—Servian Troops Retire from the Capital.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Vienna, July 30.—Belgrade has fallen. The Austro-Hungarian war office announced today that the Servian capital was occupied late yesterday.

The capture of Belgrade was preceded by a heavy bombardment. Austrian gunboats on the Danube hurled hundreds of shells into the city to drive out a small force of Serbs who fired upon the soldiers constructing a pontoon bridge to allow the passing of the invading troops. This was rendered necessary because the Serbs had blown up the bridge connecting Servia and Austria.

Several of the public buildings were set on fire by the exploding shells, but the flames have been extinguished. The ancient Belgrade fortress was reduced to ruins. Latest reports indicate that there were few casualties among the troops, but a number of non-combatants were wounded. Several Austrian soldiers were killed by Servian sharpshooters during the passage of the river.

M. Androvitch, head of one of the most important bank systems of the country, was seriously hurt when the building containing his office was wrecked.

Withdrawing from the city under the heavy fire of the Austrians, the Servians fell back to Vichnitsa, about three miles from the capital. There the Serb troops had thrown up fortifications and placed three batteries. The Austrian artillery brought across the Danube and Save rivers shelled the Servian position.

Russia Admits Mobilization.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—The Russian government officially notified Austria and Germany today that she had ordered the partial mobilization of fourteen army corps. These corps number 1,120,000 men. An imperial ukase has been issued summoning to the colors the reservists of 23 entire governments and 71 districts of 11 other governments; part of the reservists of nine districts of four governments; naval reservists of 74 districts of 12 Russian governments and one Finnish government.

The Cossacks whose military service has expired in the territories of Don, Kuban, Terek, Astrakhan, Orsk and Ural have also been summoned.

With these forces on a war footing Russia will have more than 2,000,000 men in the field. The officers necessary for the reserves have been notified to report to their stations immediately.

The medical service of the empire army has been placed on a war footing. Surgeons and nurses have been gathered and the necessary horses and vehicles have been requisitioned.

With Czar Nicholas presiding, a meeting of the entire cabinet was held at Peterhoff today. This meeting was regarded as the most important one in the history of modern Russia and official announcement as to the decision reached there was awaited with intense anxiety.

The danger of the situation was believed by financiers to be so great that it was decided to keep the stock exchange closed until Saturday.

The government has revoked the law forbidding Jews and foreigners operating financially in Russia or participating in shareholders' companies.

It was admitted by diplomats here today that they were deeply puzzled by the events of the last forty-eight hours, but they refused to say that they had given up hope of peace.

They believe that Austria intentionally precipitated the great crisis by declaring war on Servia without giving notice of her intended action to the other members of the triple alliance, Italy and Germany. As evidence of this they assert that until the actual declaration of war the Italian and German ambassadors here were considering the possibility of a mediation conference, despite the fact that Germany had refused to bring pressure on the Vienna government to gain its consent to such a plan.

London, July 30.—A newspaper dispatch from St. Petersburg states that the entire Russian army has been ordered mobilized. The Russian army in times of war numbers 5,500,000 men.

WHEAT MARKET STILL EXCITED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 30.—Wild excitement characterized the opening of the Board of Trade here and throughout the central west today. September wheat opened at 93 to 91c, a gain of five points. December advanced from 5 to 7 points right on the jump, and July was up 4½c. May soon touched 102.

St. Louis despatches showed that wheat there was from 4½ to six cents above yesterday's close, while similar advances were shown in Kansas City, Minneapolis and Duluth. At Winnipeg, October wheat advanced from six to six and a half cents and December six cents.

The advance in wheat, continued and thirty minutes after the opening July wheat was 6½ cents above yesterday's close; December 7 cents better and September 6½ cents higher. Corn and oats were dominated by the action of wheat and were higher.

HUERTA PHOTOGRAPHED FOR LAST TIME IN MEXICO.

This photograph of General Huerta with his wife and daughter, which has just been received in the United States, was posed just before the former dictator boarded the waiting ship to flee from Mexico. Huerta has said he will never return to Mexico again. The reports of a plot between Felix Diaz and Huerta to start a counter-revolt in Mexico have been denied.

COMPTROLLER'S CLERKS HAVE MADE THEIR REPORT

Lengthy Document in Which Irregular Methods of Auditing Bills by Committees and Iniquity of Supervisors Failing to Work Without Pay are Set Forth is Filed With County Treasurer.

The report of the finding of the comptroller's clerks who have been engaged for many months in investigating Ulster county affairs was filed today in the office of the county treasurer. It is a document of 358 typewritten pages and to publish in full would take about 100 columns in The Freeman.

Readers of this paper will recall the gyrations of the comptroller's clerks who have been engaged for many months in investigating Ulster county affairs was filed today in the office of the county treasurer. It is a document of 358 typewritten pages and to publish in full would take about 100 columns in The Freeman.

The report also finds that supervisors have made charges for which there is no specific provision in law, and that the work charged for should have been done without payment.

Other payments are also criticised because they were made without complying with formalities which the comptroller's clerk consider necessary.

A member of The Freeman staff is making a careful abstract of the report, which will be printed as soon as it is completed.

Although the report did not reach the county treasurer until this forenoon, the comptroller had sent out for publication on Wednesday a statement of the contents of the report and an exhortation to all to examine it, in the following words:

The report of the examination of Ulster county, made by examiners of the state comptroller's office pursuant to the provisions of the general municipal law, is filed, and concerning it State Comptroller William Summer stated as follows:

"In 1909 an examination of Ulster county was made under the provisions of the general municipal law, and many irregularities, irregularities and unauthorized acts were reported. The present report shows many of these practices have been continued, and that illegal audits and payments have continued to be made.

"It is reported that the county officials continued to make payments without proper audit or authorization, continued to retain fees reported illegal, and seem to have quite generally ignored the recommendations made in the former report and in the letter of my predecessor. This is reported to be particularly true of the office of sheriff and of the members of the board of supervisors.

"It is reported that in the bills of the former sheriff were items believed to be false and fictitious, by reason of which both the county and state paid more than could be legally charged for transportation of convicts to state prisons, and for other services.

"It is also reported that the several members of the board of supervisors have charged, audited to themselves and paid, during the years 1909 to 1913 inclusive, upwards of $24,000, believed not to be legal charges against the county, being in most cases similar to charges reported as illegal in the former report.

"It is regrettable that the board of supervisors seem to have ignored the recommendations of the former report, and now are reported liable to the repayment of this very considerable amount of money.

"In addition to the reported illegal charges made by the supervisors, there are other audited payments reported illegal, amounting to $6,724.90 for the fiscal year under examination, and payments made without proper statutory authorization of upwards of $20,000, and compensation believed illegal retained or paid to the former county treasurer and former county clerk amounting to $4,499.53. The total loss to the county reported by payments believed illegal by the examiners is $36,094.09.

"It is reported that irregularities were found in the levy, apportionment and collection of taxes, some of them believed serious enough to vitiate the levy.

"It is reported that depository banks were not properly designated and that the county treasurer had no authority to make such changes as were recommended.

"I have written to the chairman of the board of supervisors calling attention to the irregularities and illegals reported, and to the duty of the board of supervisors to secure repayment of illegal payments reported.

"I have caused a copy of the report to be filed with the county treasurer, where the law makes it a record of the office and open to inspection by anyone interested, and I urge that citizens of the county familiarize themselves with the contents of the report.

COMPROMISE MADE ON HOME RULE BILL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 30.—An agreement has been reached on the Home Rule amending bill, thus averting danger of civil war in Ireland, according to a semi-official announcement made today. It was stated that the government and the opposition had settled their differences.

General relief was apparent in all circles as soon as it was reported that no extended fight would be made, over the amending bill. The failure of the conference called by King George had resulted in pessimism, that was further increased by the "Dublin massacre."

Though the conferences adjourned with the deadlock over the territory limits of the Ulster exclusion broken, it is understood that a means of compromise was subsequently found and therefore King George is given great credit for the settlement.

Red Cross Contributions.

A communication has been received in this city from the National Red Cross, to the effect that this organization, in view of the outbreak of hostilities between Austria and Servia, will receive and forward to the Red Cross Societies of these two nations contributions for relief. Contributors should designate which Red Cross Society is to receive their donations. The local treasurer for the Ulster County Chapter of the Red Cross is Joseph M. Schaeffer, State of New York National Bank, Wall street, Kingston.

AUSTRIANS CAPTURE 40,000 SERBIAN TROOPS

First Real Battle of the War Causes Loss of 1,000 Men and Results in a Victory for Austria, According to Berlin Report.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, July 30.—One thousand soldiers have fallen in a desperate battle between Austrian and Servian troops east of Fochta. The Servians suffered a crushing defeat. Two divisions of King Peter's army were driven back and one was captured.

The Tages Zeitung states that the Servians lost 800 men, while the Austrian casualties were 200.

The prisoners taken by the Austrians are said to number 40,000.

The battle began when the Austro-Hungarian troops began to cross the Drina river, the Tages Zeitung says. Servian cavalry opposed their advance, but were driven back upon the position occupied by the infantry.

This point was shelled by Austrian artillery on the Bosnian side of the river and when the Servians were compelled to retreat they were attacked by the Austrians in force.

Salonika, July 30.—Austrian and Servian troops are engaged in battle near Semendria, on the Danube, southeast of Belgrade. The conflict began yesterday, according to dispatches from Nish, and continued until night and was resumed today. Several hundreds have been killed on both sides, the dispatches add.

The advices from Nish show that, as had been anticipated, the Austro-Hungarian army was hurled against Servia in full force, two armies invading the kingdom and a third being held in reserve to move in case of action by Montenegrin troops.

One division crossed the Danube above Semendria and moved to the Morava valley. They met sharp resistance from small detachments of Servians, who fell back after each skirmish.

Near Semendria the Austrians encountered the Servians' main body. The Servians made a determined resistance and a night battle resulted.

The first met stubborn resistance at Ratcha. There were slight losses on both sides and the Austrians retreated to Loznitza, where they fought from behind a strong fortress. The Servians held the fort until night, inflicting heavy losses on the attacking Austrians.

CLEARING HOUSE COMMITTEE TO MEET

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 30.—Following a morning of demoralization on the stock exchange during which values were slashed at the opening and then cut again after a rally that came upon banking support, it was announced that the clearing house committee—the most powerful executive body in New York finance, had been called to meet at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon to consider the world's financial situation.

The meeting was called at the request of Francis L. Hine, president of the First National Bank.

There were engaged today for shipment abroad $6,750,000 more gold than had been listed up to the opening of the market today. Call money went up to six per cent, the highest the market has known for some time.

There were opening losses of from one to five points, with Canadian Pacific the chief sufferer. Then a rally set in and prices recovered from one to three points and then before noon the market crumbled again.

Excitement died down in the pit later in the morning but the advance in wheat continued, July being 94 at 10:30 a. m.; September 94½, and December 97½.

The volume of business gradually grew smaller as the morning progressed, a number of commission houses refusing to take trades except from very strong people and then only at excessive margins. Because of the uncertainty of the trading many of the largest local traders have withdrawn from the market for the present.

GERMANY RUSHING WAR PREPARATIONS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, July 30.—Every arsenal and military depot in Germany is working to the limit today. Russia's mobilization of troops is believed to be complete, though the Czar's government is endeavoring to hide this fact. This will give him no advantage, however, for Germany is ready and awaiting for the call to battle.

Important code dispatches were received at the foreign office from St. Petersburg today and immediately transmitted to Emperor William. He remained at Postdam, but it is understood in well informed circles that if general war comes, he will take personal command of the German army and show that he is "War Lord" in fact as well as in name.

German officials carefully refrained today from commenting on the report that diplomatic relations between Austria and Russia had been broken off.

There was a spirit of grim determination evident in all government circles, but the "soft pedal" was put on to prevent any wild utterances by officials that would further imperil the chances of peace.

"Germany's efforts are directed towards peace and we want peace" said an attaché. "We must respect our treaty obligations, however."

He referred to the treaty with Austria.

Another indication of the dangerous situation was given today when Russia sent all her fleet to the Baltic.

It happened before except for this purpose it has been sent to the Baltic squadron to Copenhagen.

The harbor at Riga has been closed with mines, but merchant vessels are allowed to enter if piloted by a government employee.

DELIGHTFUL OUTING.

Hundreds Enjoyed Sail to Bear Mountain Park on Wednesday.

The excursion, given yesterday by the Sunday school of the St. James Church, was a wonderful success in every way and a better time was had by those that attended than was ever anticipated. About seven hundred people from Kingston and about three hundred members of the Methodist and Baptist Churches of Rhinecliff sailed on the Mary Powell for the most wonderful park in the state.

The boat left the Powell dock at eight-thirty and stopped at Rhinecliff to receive the large delegation of young people from that place. They arrived at Bear Mountain Park at noon, and proceeded to take advantage of the many amusements that are there afforded.

The women of the church had secured the privilege of providing the good things to eat, which were sold to those who had not brought their own lunch baskets for a very small sum. After lunch the principal feature was the great baseball game between the St. James team and the team from the Rhinecliff churches. Many of the old fans and former baseball stars were in the game like boys again, and circled the diamond like young steeds. The final score stood 20 to 8 in St. James' favor.

The amusements at this grand park afford are very numerous. The many swings were kept constantly in use and the little ones that swung in the breeze were as cheerful and happy as young birds. The tennis courts were used by those who like that sport, and the Hessian Lake, which is a perfect gem, was crowded with boats and the many bathers.

The boats on this lake are free, providing that a boat is not kept more than a half hour. If this length of time is exceeded, a small sum is charged.

Many of the older people climbed to the top of Bear Mountain and had their lunch at the top. The Mary Powell drew up to the dock at five o'clock and the party was compelled to leave the beautiful park. The St. James orchestra furnished the music for the occasion, and played both going and coming. A great deal of credit should be given to Joseph Reynolds for the great success of the sail. In every instance he was anxious to do all that he could to make the sail pleasant and enjoyable. The crew was agreeable and courteous and reflected the qualities of their late captain. The party arrived in Kingston about eight o'clock, everyone satisfied and happy. Special cars on both trolley lines met the boat for the convenience of the excursionists.

bridge connecting Serbia and Austria.

Several of the public buildings were set on fire by the exploding shells, but the flames have been extinguished. The ancient Belgrade fortress was reduced to ruins. Latest reports indicate that there were few casualties among the troops, but a number of non-combatants were wounded. Several Austrian soldiers were killed by Serbian sharpshooters during the passage of the river.

M. Androvitch, head of one of the most important bank systems of the country, was seriously hurt when the building containing his office was wrecked.

Withdrawing from the city under the heavy fire of the Austrians, the Servians fell back to Vichnitza, about three miles from the capital.

There the Serb troops had thrown up fortifications and placed three batteries. The Austrian artillery brought across the Danube and Save rivers shelled the Servian position.

Russia Admits Mobilization.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—The Russian government officially notified Austria and Germany today that she had ordered the partial mobilization of fourteen army corps. These corps number 1,120,000 men. An imperial ukase has been issued summoning to the colors, the reservists of 23 entire governments and 71 districts of 11 other governments; part of the reservists of nine districts of four governments; naval reservists of 74 districts of 12 Russian governments and one Finnish government.

The Cossacks whose military service has expired in the territories of Don, Kuban, Terek, Astrakhan, Orenburg and Ural have also been summoned.

With these forces on a war footing Russia will have more than 2,000,000 men in the field. The officers necessary for the reserves have been notified to report to their regiments immediately.

The medical service of the army has been placed on a war footing. Surgeons and nurses have been gathered and the necessary horses and vehicles have been requisitioned.

With Czar Nicholas presiding, a meeting of the entire cabinet was held at Peterhoff today. This meeting was regarded as the most important one in the history of modern Russia and official announcement as to the decision reached there was awaited with intense anxiety.

The danger of the situation was believed by financiers to be so great that it was decided to keep the stock exchange closed until Saturday.

The government has revoked the law forbidding Jews and foreigners operating financially in Russia or participating in shareholders' companies.

It was admitted by diplomats here today that they were deeply puzzled by the events of the last forty-eight hours, but they refused to say that they had given up hope of peace.

They believe that Austria intentionally precipitated the great crisis by declaring war on Serbia without giving notice of her intended action to the other members of the triple alliance, Italy and Germany. As evidence of this they assert that until the actual declaration of war the Italian and German ambassadors here were considering the possibility of a mediation conference, despite the fact that Germany had refused to bring pressure on the Vienna government to gain its consent to such a plan.

London, July 30.—A newspaper dispatch from St. Petersburg states that the entire Russian army has been ordered mobilized. The Russian army in times of war numbers 5,500,000 men.

WHEAT MARKET STILL EXCITED

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 30.—Wild excitement characterized the opening of the Board of Trade here and throughout the central west today. September wheat opened at 93 to 91c, a gain of five points, December advanced from 5 to 7 points right on the jump, and July was up 4 1/4c. May soon touched 102.

St. Louis dispatches showed that wheat there was from 4 1/2 to six cents above yesterday's close, while similar advances were shown in Kansas City, Minneapolis and Duluth. At Winnipeg, October wheat advanced from six to six and a half cents and December six cents.

The advance in wheat continued and thirty minutes after the opening July wheat was 6 1/2 cents above yesterday's close, December 7 cents better and September 6 1/2 cents higher. Corn and oats were dominated by the action of wheat and were higher.

AUSTRIANS CAPTURE 40,000 SERBIAN TROOPS

First Real Battle of the War Causes Loss of 1,000 Men and Results in a Victory for Austria, According to Berlin Report.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, July 30.—One thousand soldiers have fallen in a desperate battle between Austrian and Serbian troops east of Fofcha. The Serbians suffered a crushing defeat. Two divisions of King Peter's army were driven back and one was captured.

The Tages Zeitung states that the Serbians lost 800 men, while the Austrian casualties were 200.

The prisoners taken by the Austrians are said to number 40,000.

The battle began when the Austro-Hungarian troops began to cross the Drina river, the Tages Zeitung says. Serbian cavalry opposed their advance, but were driven back upon the position occupied by the infantry.

This point was shelled by Austrian artillery on the Bosnian side of the river and when the Serbians were impelled to retreat they were attacked by the Austrians in force.

Salonika, July 30.—Austrian and Serbian troops are engaged in battle near Samendria, on the Danube, southeast of Belgrade. The conflict began yesterday, according to dispatches from Nish, and continued until night and was resumed today. Several hundreds have been killed on both sides, the dispatches add.

The advances from Nish show that, as had been anticipated, the Austro-Hungarian army was hurled against Serbia in full force, two armies invading the kingdom and a third being held in reserve to move in case of action by Montenegrin troops.

One division crossed the Danube above Semendria and moved to the Morava valley. They met sharp resistance from small detachments of Serbians, who fell back after each skirmish.

Near Semendria the Austrians encountered the Serbians' main body. The Serbs made a determined resistance and the night was dark.

The first morning's fighting was at Katcha. There were slight losses on both sides and the Serbs retreated to Loznica, where they fought from behind a strong fortress. The Serbs held the fort until night, inflicting heavy losses on the attacking Austrians.

The harbor at Riga has been closed with mines, but merchant vessels are allowed to enter if piloted by a government employee.

DELIGHTFUL OUTING.
Hundreds Enjoyed Sail to Bear Mountain Park on Wednesday.

The excursion, given yesterday by the Sunday school of the St. James Church, was a wonderful success in every way and a better time was had by those that attended than was ever anticipated. About seven hundred people from Kingston and about three hundred members of the Methodist and Baptist Churches of Rhinecliff sailed on the Mary Powell for the most wonderful park in the state. The boat left the Powell dock at eight-thirty and stopped at Rhinecliff to receive the large delegation of young people from that place. They arrived at Bear Mountain Park at noon, and proceeded to take advantage of the many amusements that are there afforded.

The women of the church had secured the privilege of providing the good things to eat, which were sold to those who had not brought their own lunch baskets for a very small sum. After lunch the principal feature was the great baseball game between the St. James team and the team from the Rhinecliff churches. Many of the old fans and former baseball stars were in the game like boys again, and circled the diamond like young steeds. The final score stood 20 to 8 in St. James' favor.

The amusements that this grand park afford are very numerous. The many swings were kept constantly in use and the little ones that swung in the breeze were as cheerful and happy as young birds. The tennis courts were used by those who like that sport, and the Hessian Lake, which is a perfect gem, was crowded with boats and the many bathers. The boats on this lake are free, providing that a boat is not kept more than a half hour. If this length of time is exceeded, a small sum is charged.

Many of the older people climbed to the top of Bear Mountain and had their lunch at the top. The Mary Powell drew up to the dock at five o'clock and the party was compelled to leave the beautiful park. The St. James orchestra furnished the music for the occasion, and played both going and coming. A great deal of credit should be given to Joseph Reynolds for the great success

REV. L. R. LONG SHOT BY HOLDUP MEN

Details of the assault on the Rev. L. R. Long of Margaretville, a former pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, this city, are given in the Oneonta Herald as follows:

The Rev. L. R. Long of Margaretville, superintendent of schools in the Middletown-Roxbury district, a retired clergyman well known in this section, was held up about 6 o'clock Tuesday evening by a couple of Italians and shot at five times while driving on the highway near the Elgin creamery at Kelly's Corners, a small station on the Ulster and Delaware railroad about six miles from here. Two of the shots took effect. One in the left shoulder and one in the foot. It is not thought that he is critically injured. The Italians, who had demanded money of Mr. Long, after they fired the shots ran across the railroad track and disappeared in the woods about an eighth of a mile distant.

Mr. Long's horse took fright as the last shots were fired and ran down the road a distance of between a quarter and a half mile to the farm house of H. D. Searles, Mr. Long making an ineffectual effort to stop the animal. Mr. Searles saw the horse and stopped him. Mr. Long told his story and was helped into the house. Dr. J. A. Gaul of Halcottville and Dr. John Telford of Margaretville were summoned. The physicians made an examination and found that he will recover unless unexpected complications develop.

News of the attempted hold up quickly spread throughout the community and Sheriff J. J. Farrell was notified. Former Sheriff William T. Austin, Constable Edwards and Special Officer Clifford Anderson are out with posse and the woods and all roads leading therefrom are being watched carefully.

Mr. Long was on his way home from Halcottville and driving along on an easy trot when he was accosted by the Italians who asked him for some matches. When he reached them out they at once demanded money and when he reached in his pocket apparently to secure some change, one of the fellows pulled a revolver and fired five times in quick succession.

Residents of that section had seen the fellows loafing about for a week or more. They are described as about 45 years of age, and it is said they had been sleeping in an old creamery and hanging around during the day with the state road gang but doing no work.

Mr. Long, who is about 50 years of age and a retired Methodist minister, is one of the prominent residents of Margaretville. He came into this conference in 1896 and has held pastorates at Callicoon, New Paltz, Kingston and Margaretville. For a year he was principal of the Margaretville high school and two years ago was chosen district superintendent of the schools. He has written considerably for the newspapers and has numerous friends who rejoice at his escape from fatal injuries. He has been removed to his home in Margaretville.

MACHINES HUM AT SUIT FACTORY

The busy hum of sewing machines and the hustle and bustle among the men tailors bear evidence of preparations for a lively fall season at the plant of the J. Davis Manufacturing Company at 602 Broadway. Already orders for autumn coats, suits, skirts, etc., are pouring in from department stores of the larger cities in the state, one firm alone having placed a demand for 2,500 suits. Mr. Davis finds it necessary not only to enlarge his manufacturing plant, but more machines and additional help must be secured at once to turn out the work now on hand and large quantities that are anticipated later in the season. No local retail stores are supplied with garments by this firm. An outlet for all articles manufactured is found outside of Kingston. Individual coats and suits, however, are made to order for any woman in Ulster county who may wish to patronize the company.

P. A. makes men smoke hungry

Just you get a whiff of "the national joy smoke" and it's dollars to doughnuts you beat it 'cross lots to the nearest store that sells tobacco—and stock up! The flavor and aroma of Prince Albert has got 'em all backed off the boards. It sure will hit the spot with you. Get the drift of that?

PRINCE ALBERT

just does all that we say it will do. It can't bite your tongue and it can't parch your throat. All this is because P. A. is made by a patented process that cuts out the bite! Why, this process has simply revolutionized smoking tobacco.

Prince Albert rolls up the bulkiest makin's cigarette you or any other man ever smoked. It puts the jolt of joy right into your system.

You can just do "makin's" sunrise to sunset and have a lot of fun. Why, P. A. in a cigarette is absolutely a revelation. You go to it!

Buy Prince Albert everywhere; in the tippy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; also in pound and half-pound humidor.

P. A. makes men smoke hungry

Just you get a whiff of "the national joy smoke" and it's dollars to doughnuts you beat it 'cross lots to the nearest store that sells tobacco—and stock up! The flavor and aroma of Prince Albert has got 'em all backed off the boards. It sure will hit the spot with you. Get the drift of that?

PRINCE ALBERT

just does all that we say it will do. It can't bite your tongue and it can't parch your throat. All this is because P. A. is made by a patented process that cuts out the bite! Why, this process has simply revolutionized smoking tobacco.

Prince Albert rolls up the bulkiest makin's cigarette you or any other man ever smoked. It puts the jolt of joy right into your system.

You can just do "makin's" sunrise to sunset and have a lot of fun. Why, P. A. in a cigarette is absolutely a revelation. You go to it!

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 30, 1914.

Women may become candidates for delegates to the Constitutional Convention, but permission to sit, if elected, will depend on the action of the Convention itself, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Carmody, at the request of the suffragists. Thinking people are of the opinion that the Convention should be made up of the individuals best qualified to frame fundamental laws, but the suffragists, with strange inconsistency, are trying to raise a sex qualification. If any woman in this State who could be induced to run for office has ever made a study of constitutions we never heard of it. She has not contributed articles to the magazines or newspapers throwing light on the subject. This is no discredit to women, since their interests lie in different fields. Men never "butt into" sewing clubs or mothers' conventions. Likewise, skirts are out of place where men's work is to be done.

"Every day we find gaps in the law," says Chairman Dowling of the State Workmen's Compensation Commission. It has been discovered that a man who falls while putting up an awning does not come under any one of the forty-two classes of employees mentioned in the law. The Commission is also struggling with the problem whether a hotel porter who fell down an elevator was a domestic servant in the meaning of the law or not. It is clear that employees in concerns not conducted for profit do not benefit under the law. Employees of municipalities and of all religious and charitable institutions are out in the cold. Farm hands, domestic servants and workers at odd jobs are left out. We do not believe that public sentiment will long endure such inequalities. Money paid in indemnities comes out of the pockets of the general public just as surely as if it were included in the tax levy, and every person injured without fault of his own should benefit. Of course, this in effect will be precisely the same as if we should vastly extend the system of "outdoor relief" managed by alms commissioners or like officials, but its new name will make beneficiaries like it better.

"We are not running amuck," said President Wilson yesterday to a delegation of the National Trade Association of Wholesalers; "we are trying to close this era of suspicion." Nevertheless, when the delegation asked him to use his influence for a modification of the Trade Commission bill authorizing the Commission to determine, at the request of a corporation, whether certain of its business practices were lawful, he refused. It is a maxim that ignorance of the law excuses no one, but it ought to do so on occasion. If we are to have a paternalistic form of government, the government ought to do as other parents do. If a little boy should ask his father if he might do so and so and the father should tell him to use his judgment and get a licking if he erred, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children would take notice and action. The chief objection to the pending legislation is that no one can be sure he understands it and capital naturally shrinks from enterprises which may unexpectedly be destroyed by a court decision. Business would revive at once if there were some way of finding out what practices are legal. Until this way is provided every change in the laws, no matter how well intended, is bound to retard prosperity.

We have already said a good word for our old friend, Dr. Porter, who would like to be Secretary of State. Now we receive a letter from Mr. Francis M. Hugo of Watertown, who ran for that office two years ago and who is also a first-rate man for the place. Mr. Hugo encloses clippings from newspapers friendly to him in which the point is made that Mr. Hinman, who may be nominated for Governor, lives in Broome County, which is also the home of Dr. Porter. It also appears that all the ambitious Republicans in Northern New York have refrained from asking for any office for themselves, so as to give Mr. Hugo clear sailing in case consideration is given to geography in the making up of the ticket. Under the convention system a candidate for Governor would first be nominated. If Mr. Hinman, for example, were nominated, it would, of course bar out anybody else from his county. If he should not be nominated it would probably be considered politic to give Dr. Porter a place on the ticket and Mr. Hugo would also be likely to appear as a candidate for some office. Thus the party would be united. Under the preposterous law we now have, there is no way to adjust such friendly rivalries. But, in the words of the novelist, "It never can happen again."

A NOVEL CLUB.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Farmer folk and their wives—quite particularly their wives and families—who have the fortune to live in the county of Jackson, Indiana, are entitled to membership in the new farmers' club in the city of Seymour, Indiana. The club house is a memorial to Captain Meedy W. Shields, the founder of the town, a farmer himself and one of the pioneers of southern Indiana, and his heirs are the donors. It is in process of erection now, and while anyone who answers the agricultural roll-call, in whole or in part, will be welcomed to the club, free of charge, its chief purpose is to offer a hospitable sort of anchorage to the women who accompany their menfolk to town.

Quite likely all of us have wondered, time and again, what the women do when their shopping trips are over, where they rest and where they go while waiting for the farmers to dispose of their produce. Seymour residents have wondered with the rest, but with the completion of the clubhouse the question will be solved for them; and it is a practical, friendly sort of way of bringing the city and country together.

Of course, the club will be equipped with a big, cosy, living-room, abundantly furnished with restful chairs and the like, with writing and reading tables, books, papers, magazines and the usual offerings to while the hours away.

But the rest of the equipment is not so much "of course," for the club will provide its women visitors from the farms with two nurseries, where the little folk may be kept while their mothers are shopping, sight-seeing or following fancy's will. And each nursery will have its quota of little cribs, "jumpers" and chairs, with matrons in charge to see that all goes well with the babies.

As to meals, none will be prepared or served at the club, but a big dining room will be furnished with tables and chairs; and the women may feast upon their own basket dinners. During the summer months a refrigerator will extend its cool services to the members, and baskets may be checked, to be called for at pleasure.

Comfortable rest rooms will be available for the wives and mothers and children of farmers, and a large assembly room will provide a place for the holding of institutes and other meetings.

Hospitable, is it not, particularly toward the women, for the donors are making it plain that the clubhouse has been planned especially for them. Farmers they say, when their work is completed, can always find some way, some place to spend their leisure hours, but the women are more or less stranded, and they want every woman in the county to feel quite at home at the club, to rest, to dine, to read, to write, or to wait, as may be.

And it is significant of other ways in which the wives and daughters and sisters and aunts of farmers are gradually coming into their own. In the harder yesteryears, farmers' wives, in appalling numbers, were driven to insanity by the "all work and no play" that made up their lives. Labor-saving devices drifted to the fields, to the barns, the dairies, before ever they were thought of for the kitchens, and conveniences and equipments to lighten and lessen the work and to increase the output of farms abundantly poured in while farm women were drudging away after the fashion of their grandmothers. Farmer folk need all the improvements that prosperity can bring, but along with the up-to-date farms, machinery and stock, realization has come—to Uncle Sam, with the rest—that the lives of women on the farms must be made easier, brighter and pleasanter.

And do you realize some of the agencies that are stepping in from cities to farms, winning women away from the deadly monotony that so long has crushed them? Four that are counted as leaders in the work are the telephone, the phonograph, the rural free delivery and—the mail order houses with their catalogues filled from cover to cover with alluring offerings.

The matter-of-fact United States census has shown an alarming exodus of daughters, as well as of sons, from farms to cities, and the reason offered for the running away is that they "don't have to work half so hard" and can find "plenty of fun all the time."

Of course, it won't do to have daughters run away, any more than sons, and it won't do to have them grow weary to death of life on the farms, so institutes are planned for the womenfolk and they are encouraged to join rural clubs—to do anything sane and rational that may bring back the song in the kitchens and the homes.

And some folk are saying that there should not be quite so many hard and fast lines about the "man's work" and the "woman's work" on the farms; that a lot of work traditionally belonging to men might well pass into the hands of women for the sake of giving them a share in the healthful outdoor exercise in the fields. They do not propose to take up the European way of sending women into the fields, whether or no, but to install gasoline engines into the kitchens to lessen the labors there, with men standing guard for awhile, while their wives and daughters are swinging their arms and working away in the great healing outdoors.

But will the farmers consent to that kind of efficiency and co-operation on the farms? It is expecting rather much, in view of long training in another direction.

FRANCES SHAFFER.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

After the Ball—"Didn't you find him wonderfully light on his feet for such a heavily built man?" "Oh, yes; he was light enough on his own feet."—Life.

Irate Border—"I thought you told me I could sleep under blankets here of nights?" Unperturbed Farmer—"So ye kin, ef ye want to, and you got the blankets."—Baltimore American.

"You told me you hadn't any mosquitoes," said the summer boarder, reproachfully. "I hadn't," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "Them you see floatin' around come from Si Perkins' place. They ain't mine."—Washington Star.

Flora—"So it's all off between you and Jack?" Dora—"Yes, I had to give him up, poor fellow! I'm awfully fond of him, too; but you know he never could afford to pay me the alimony I've been accustomed to getting."—Judge.

Prospective Subscriber (in office of Wyoming Weekly Whoop)—"Don't you have any clubbing propositions?" Editor and Proprietor—"Oh, once in a while, but horse-whipping and shooting propositions seem to be the favorites around here!"—Puck.

"I'd like to start at the bottom," said the young man applying for work. "I'm sorry, but we can't use you there. All those places are reserved for the sons of our directors who think it fashionable to start that way. We can give you a place a little higher up, though, at less money."—Detroit Free Press.

Congratulated Them.

A Polish couple came before a justice of the peace to be married. The young man handed him the marriage license, and the pair stood up before him.

"Join hands," said the justice. They did so and the justice looked at the document, which authorized him to unite in matrimony Zacharewicz Perzynski and Lewordz Jeuliniski.

"Ahem," he said. "Zacha-h'm-ski, do you take this woman," etc., "Yes, sir," responded the young man.

Leo-h'm-h'm-ski, do you take this man to be," etc., "Yes sir," replied the woman.

"Then I pronounce you man and wife," said the justice, glad to find something he could pronounce, and I heartily congratulate you both on having reduced those two names to one."—London Opinion.

A Divorce Cure.

Chauncey M. Depew, discussing the change for the worse in the ideals of the American girl, said recently: "Our young women should think less of tango teas and automobileing. They would do well to return to the ideals which prevailed when I was a boy. These ideals include the ability to manage a house properly, an intelligent supervision of children and a thorough knowledge of the kitchen."

"This last accomplishment, I think, should be given particular attention," Mr. Depew concludes with a smile, "for many a good husband nowadays is spoiled in the cooking."—New York World.

Modern Morals.

Senator Joseph E. Ransdell was talking in Washington about his bill for the abolition of divorce.

The bill's object," he said. It's object is, of course, to reduce immorality, loose thinking, loose speaking."

Senator Ransdell smiled and added: "Don't take it too seriously—but there is an episode that throws a light on modern morals."

"A business man came home unexpectedly one morning and found his little son busy at his wife's dressing table."

"What on earth are you doing there, my lad?" he asked. "I'm mixing powdered quinine with mother's face powder," the youngster answered. "She going motoring with Mr. Smith. Won't she taste bitter?"—New York World.

Alas and Alack!

Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota when a young man went to a small Wisconsin town to deliver the Fourth of July oration at the big patriotic celebration. The speaker's platform was erected at one side of the town square, and the public thronged the place about it and applauded vigorously.

Just before the future senator began his speech, however, a young local attorney took the stand and rendered the Declaration of Independence with all the swing and fervor that such a gathering would engender.

After the speeches were over an old farmer who knew Clapp well came over to him.

"Mose that was a good speech of yours," he said, "but to be honest, I liked that other young fellow's better. He hit it up just right for me; them's my sentiments, too!"—Washington Star.

Making Him Comfortable.

Commodore Peary, discussing hotels with a Washington reporter, said:

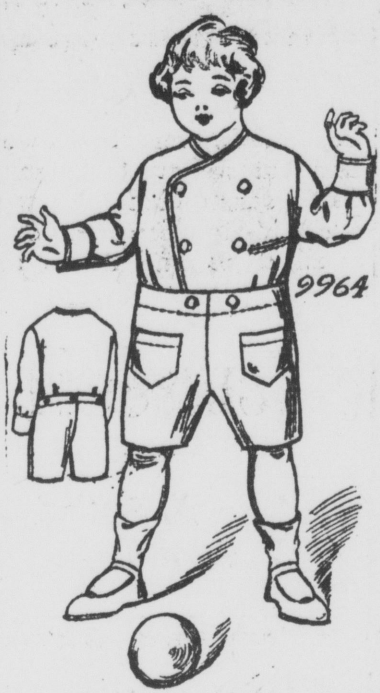

"Modern hotels are becoming more and more luxurious. Every bedroom now has its private bath and dressing room. These hotels can't do enough to make you comfortable."

Commodore Peary stroked his mustache and smiled.

"In fact," he said, "when I stopped just after my return from the North Pole, at Simeon Ford's hotel, Mr. Ford bowed and rubbed his hands and said anxiously:

"We shall do everything to make you feel at home. Would you like a nice large cake of ice in your bed, sir?"—New York Press.

It is in process of erection now, and while anyone who answers the agricultural roll-call, in whole or in part, will be welcomed to the club, free of charge, its chief purpose is to offer a hospitable sort of anchorage to the women who accompany their men-folk to town.

Quite likely all of us have wondered, time and again, what the women do when their shopping trips are over, where they rest and where they go while waiting for the farmers to dispose of their produce. Seymour residents have wondered with the rest, but with the completion of the clubhouse the question will be solved for them; and it is a practical, friendly sort of way of bringing the city and country together.

Of course, the club will be equipped with a big, cosy, living-room, abundantly furnished with restful chairs and the like, with writing and reading tables, books, papers, magazines and the usual offerings to while the hours away.

But the rest of the equipment is not so much "of course," for the club will provide its women visitors from the farms with two nurseries, where the little folk may be kept while their mothers are shopping, sight-seeing or following fancy's will. And each nursery will have its quota of little cribs, "jumpers" and chairs, with matrons in charge to see that all goes well with the babies.

As to meals, none will be prepared or served at the club, but a big dining room will be furnished with tables and chairs; and, as there may be many upon their own basket dinners. During the summer months a refrigerator will extend its cool services to the members, and baskets may be checked, to be called for at pleasure. Comfortable rest rooms will be available for the wives and mothers and children of farmers, and a large assembly room will provide a place for the holding of institutes and other meetings.

Hospitable, is it not, particularly toward the women, for the donors are making it plain that the clubhouse has been planned especially for them. Farmers they say, when their work is completed, can always find some way, some place to spend their leisure hours, but the women are more or less stranded, and they want every woman in the county to feel quite at home at the club, to rest, to dine, to read, to write, or to wait, as may be.

And it is significant of other ways in which the wives and daughters and sisters and aunts of farmers are gradually coming into their own. In the harder yesterdays, farmers' wives, in appalling numbers, were driven to insanity by the "all work and no play" that made up their lives. Labor-saving devices drifted to the fields, to the barns, the dairies, before ever they were thought of for the kitchens, and conveniences and equipments to lighten and lessen the work and to increase the output of farms abundantly poured in while farm women were drudging away after the fashion of their grandmothers. Farmer folk need all the improvements that prosperity can bring but along with the up-to-date farms, machinery and stock, realization has come to Uncle Sam, with the rest—that the lives of women on the farms must be made easier, brighter and pleasanter.

And do you realize some of the agencies that are stepping in from cities to farms, winning women away from the deadly monotony that so long has crushed them? Four that are counted as leaders in the work are the telephone, the phonograph, the rural free delivery and—the mail order houses with their catalogues filled from cover to cover with alluring offerings.

The matter-of-fact United States census has shown an alarming exodus of daughters, as well as of sons, from farms to cities, and the reason offered for the running away is that they "don't have to work half so hard" and can find "plenty of fun all the time."

Of course, it won't do to have daughters run away, any more than sons, and it won't do to have them grow weary to death of life on the farms, so institutes are planned for the womenfolk and they are encouraged to join rural clubs—to do anything sane and rational that may bring back the song in the kitchens and the homes.

And some folk are saying that there should not be quite so many hard and fast lines about the "man's work" and the "woman's work" on the farms; that a lot of work traditionally belonging to men might well pass into the hands of women for the sake of giving them a share in the healthful outdoor exercise in the fields. They do not propose to take up the European way of sending women into the fields, whether or no, but to install gasoline engines in the kitchens to lessen the labors there, with men standing guard for awhile, while their wives and daughters are swinging their arms and working away in the great healing outdoors.

But will the farmers consent to that kind of efficiency and co-operation on the farms? It is expecting rather much, in view of long training in another direction.

FRANCES SHAFFER.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

After the Ball—"Didn't you find him wonderfully light on his feet for such a heavily built man?" "Oh, yes; he was light enough on his own feet."—Life.

Irate Border—"I thought you told me I could sleep under blankets here of nights?" Unperturbed Farmer—"So ye kin, ef ye want to, and you got the blankets."—Baltimore American.

"You told me you hadn't any mosquitoes," said the summer boarder, reproachfully. "I hadn't," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "Then you see floatin' around come from St. Perkin's place. They ain't mine."—Washington Star.

Flora—"So it's all off between you and Jack?" Dora—"Yes. I had to give him up, poor fellow! I'm awfully fond of him, too; but you know he never could afford to pay me the alimony I've been accustomed to getting."—Judge.

Prospective Subscriber (in office of Wyoming Weekly Whoop)—"Don't you have any clubbing propositions?" Editor and Proprietor—"Oh, once in a while but horse-whipping and shooting propositions seem to be the favorites around here!"—Puck.

"I'd like to start at the bottom," said the young man applying for work. "I'm sorry, but we can't use you there. All those places are reserved for the sons of our directors who thing it fashionable to start that way. We can give you a place a little higher up, though, at less money."—Detroit Free Press.

CONGRATULATED THEM.

A Polish couple came before a justice of the peace to be married. The young man handed him the marriage license, and the pair stood up before him.

"Join hands," said the justice. They did so and the justice looked at the document, which authorized him to unite in matrimony Zachary Perzynski and Lewarda Jeulin-ski.

"Ahem," he said. "Zachary-h-m-ski, do you take this woman," etc.

"Yes, sir," responded the young man.

Leo-h-m-h-m-ski, do you take this man to be," etc.

"Yes sir," replied the woman.

"Then I pronounce you man and wife," said the justice, glad to find something he could pronounce, and I heartily congratulate you both on having reduced those two names to one."—London Opinion.

A DIVORCE CURE.

Chauncey M. Depew, discussing the change for the worse in the ideals of the American girl, said recently: "Our young women should think less of tango teas and automobiling. They would do well to return to the ideals which prevailed when I was a lad. These ideals include the ability to manage a house properly, an intelligent supervision of children and a thorough knowledge of the kitchen."

"This last accomplishment, I think, should be given particular attention," Mr. Depew concludes with a smile. "For many a good husband nowadays is spoiled in the cooking."—New York World.

MODERN MORALS.

Senator Joseph E. Ransdell was talking in Washington about his bill for the abolition of divorce. The bill's object," he said. "It's object is, of course, to reduce immorality, loose thinking, loose speaking."

Senator Ransdell smiled and added: "Don't take it too seriously—but there is an episode that throws a light on modern morals."

"A business man came home unexpectedly one morning and found his little son busy at his wife's dressing table."

"What on earth are you doing there, my lad?" he asked.

"I'm mixing powdered quinine with mother's face powder," the youngster answered. "She going motorin' with Mr. Smith. Won't she taste bitter?"—New York World.

ALAS AND ALACK!

Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota when a young man went to a small Wisconsin town to deliver the Fourth of July oration at the big patriotic celebration. The speaker's platform was erected at one side of the town square, and the public thronged the place about it and applauded vigorously.

Just before the future senator began his speech, however, a young local attorney took the stand and rendered the Declaration of Independence with all the swing and forvor, that such a gathering would engender. After the speeches were over an old farmer who knew Clapp well came over to him.

"More that was a good speech of yours," he said, "but to be honest, I liked that other young fellow's better. He hit it up just right for me; them's my sentiments, too!"—Washington Star.

MAKING HIM COMFORTABLE.

Commodore Peary, discussing hotels with a Washington reporter, said:

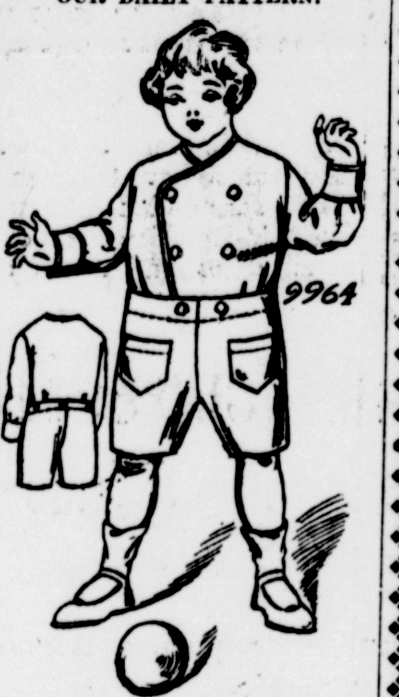

"Modern hotels are becoming more and more luxurious. Every bedroom now has its private bath and dressing room. These hotels can't do enough to make you comfortable."

Commodore Peary stroked his mustache and smiled.

"In fact," he said, "when I stopped just after my return from the North Pole, at Simeon Ford's hotel, Mr. Ford bowed and rubbed his hands and said anxiously:

"We shall do everything to make you feel at home. Would you like a nice large cake of ice in your bed, sir?"—New York Press.

Concert in Kerhonkson.

The summer concert company of William F. Kelly will give an entertainment at Kerhonkson on Tuesday evening of next week. Mr. Kelly is well known in operatic circles and has sung in all of our principal cities in company with the most famous singers of the day. He has traveled extensively with the Henry W. Savage Company, singing the leading part in "Madame Butterfly," and also doing solo work in Wagner's greatly cherished "Parsifal," when it was first produced in this country. Mr. Kelly's voice is a ringing tenor robusto which can fill with ease the largest auditoriums, and Kingston considered herself fortunate in securing his services when the excellent amateur production of the "Mikado" was given three years ago. Since that time Mr. Kelly has remained in Kingston, singing in St. James's M. E. Church and devoting himself to vocal instruction.

Concert in Kerhonkson.

The summer concert company of William F. Kelly will give an entertainment at Kerhonkson on Tuesday evening of next week. Mr. Kelly is well known in operatic circles and has sung in all of our principal cities in company with the most famous singers of the day. He has traveled extensively with the Henry W. Savage Company, singing the leading part in "Madame Butterfly," and also doing solo work in Wagner's greatly cherished "Parsifal," when it was first produced in this country. Mr. Kelly's voice is a ringing tenor robusto which can fill with ease the largest auditoriums, and Kingston considered herself fortunate in securing his services when the excellent amateur production of the "Mikado" was given three years ago. Since that time Mr. Kelly has remained in Kingston, singing in St. James's M. E. Church and devoting himself to vocal instruction.

SAN JUAN DE ULLOA PRISON PEST HOLE

Horrors of Mexican Prison Described by Lieutenant McEntee in Letter to His Brother—Celebrating the Fourth in Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 15, 1914.

Dear Dwight:
Your letter of June 25th received. Am glad to hear from you again and to learn that you are all well. The fact that some of my old Kingston friends enjoyed the letter I wrote you, which appeared in The Freeman, is a reward worth while. If it gives pleasure to any of my friends there at home to read my letters to you they are certainly heartily welcome to do so as far as I am concerned.

Doubtless you have seen pictures of the San Juan de Ulloa prison, which is located in the Vera Cruz inner harbor, in the papers and magazines. While out taking lunch with Commander Bostwick, captain of the gun boat Nashville, the other day, we went all through this grim prison which has such an infamous history. It was built many generations ago by Charles the Fifth of Spain and has been a terror for centuries.

This prison is an immense fortress, having been built by the leading military engineers of the age and fulfilled every tactical requirement for defense. The walls are great masses of concrete, surrounded by a moat and protected by strong outworks. We pried into every part of this old relic of past ages. There are dungeons in this prison fortress where the sunlight has never entered. There are submarine cells where men have stood waist deep in water, while the tide was in, serving their weary sentence in this hell hole of a prison.

Ten years was considered a life sentence, the records show, as few men could stand the pain, misery, hardships and suffering of solitary confinement for a longer period than that.

The story of San Juan de Ulloa will never be told in full. It cost Charles the Fifth and succeeding kings of Spain many pieces of gold and was years in building. When completed it was fitted out with all the modern implements of torture known to human skill.

We passed through long galleries where hundreds of men were crowded together like sheep. Absolutely no provision made for sanitation and no light or ventilation except through a small opening in the thick ceiling. There are galleries in series where no sound of the outside world ever penetrates except the monotonous beating of the waves on the great outer walls.

There are underground cells for political prisoners upon whom the disfavor of the government has fallen, cells where the light of day never entered. We were accompanied by an orderly with a lantern and in these great cells the darkness was so dense that it seemed to hem us in, the rays from the lantern failing to penetrate the gloom for more than a few feet.

There are two famous cells, the "El Purgatorio" and "El Gloria," that stand out more loathsome than all the rest. A small opening in the ceiling would be raised by the jailer and food lowered on a pole in the darkness to the unfortunate occupant, who could not lie down nor stand erect but had to assume a crouching position. Sun light never entered and man's voice was never heard. Can you imagine anything more horrible?

Many of the most distinguished men of Mexico have been confined in this fortress Porfirio Diaz himself, a brother of the late President Madero, Felix Diaz, candidate for president last October, Enrique Zepeda, reputed son of President Huerta, are a few of the notables of very recent times who have been incarcerated in this pest hole.

The American naval forces liberated all the political prisoners that were confined here when the port was taken. They flushed out the filth with fire hose, fumigated all the buildings which go to make up this great pile of masonry and had such a house cleaning as it never saw before. It is the fond and fervent hope of all Mexicans that this place be renovated kept clean and sanitary and do away with the underground cells.

One room was particularly curious. It seemed to be a room for the guards, as there was a row of pegs about the four walls on which to hang their accoutrements. Upon closer examination the pegs proved to be not the usual wooden peg but the large bone of the human arm.

We had a really glorious Fourth down here. It was safe and sane but full of fun. It did not look or sound like the Fourth until at noon when every ship in the harbor, American and foreign alike fired a salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the day. That brought the Vera Cruzonans hurrying to the doors and windows of their houses, wondering what the incomprehensible "Gringos" were up to in disturbing the echoes of a perfectly peaceful ordinary day in July. All ships were dressed for the occasion. Another officer of my battalion and myself went out to the "North Dakota" for dinner in the evening. As the sun was setting, retreat was sounded and it was an impressive sight to see each ship stripped of its flag decorations almost in the same instant.

The army, navy and marine corps spent the day in athletic competition. The morning was taken up with swimming races and field day sports of the usual type. In the afternoon there was a final tug of war and ball game to determine the championship of the forces in Vera Cruz. By a process of elimination extending over a couple of weeks, the teams represented their respective branches on this day were the pick of that particular branch of the service.

The navy carried away the swimming cups, baseball championship and tug of war prize. The swimming interested me greatly. It was a wonderful exhibition of skill and a sight worth seeing.

The field sports were also interesting. They were pulled off promptly. One Mexican woman among those who went to see the Americans at play came near paying with her life for her curiosity. We have two troops of cavalry here you know and their contribution to the day's sport was a Roman race. She got in the middle of the track just near the finish of this race in which four teams did a Buffalo Bill stunt of riding two horses by, standing on their blanketed backs. One of these acrobatic cavalymen standing on two horses that were going like mad bore down on the woman who was frozen to the spot in terror at the approaching whirlwind. The rider had a fraction of a second to think what to do. He spread his legs apart until they were just about at right angles to his body, shoving his horses apart and skillfully guided them, one on either side of that poor Mexican woman, the rider passing over her like a streak and she was safe although a very much scared person. This won the hearts of all the sailor lads who were not used to such stunts. They were loud in their praises of the clever cavalymen.

The baseball game was the most enthusiastic spectacle that I have ever witnessed. Over 4,000 fans saw the game won by the navy. Not the least enthusiastic was Admiral Craddock of the British navy. Despite the terrific heat it was a contest. The result was in doubt until the last inning. The score was Navy, 4; Land Forces, 3. I never saw or heard such enthusiasm. Each side has its own band and good rosters those bands were too.

After the game the sailors section broke for the immense championship pennant. Headed by the band, playing that fine march "Anchors Away" and followed by the pennant bearing squad and nearly every sailor present marching lockstep around the field they marched cheering until they could cheer no more from utter exhaustion.

We had fireworks at 8 p. m. They were sent down from New Orleans for the occasion and set off from one of the navy tugs. It was a beautiful display that would rival in grandeur the Paine exhibitions at Coney Island. Among the fire works was a fire balloon. It made a fine ascension and soared high into the heavens. Then it took a bee line for the interior of the country and passed at a respectable height over the Mexican outposts, looking for all the world like one of those nocturnal airplanes which the Mexican City papers said the Gringos were sending across the lines to drop bombs on the Mexican forces. Whether it was

WEST SAUGERTIES.

West Saugerties, July 30.—The new Country Club House although not quite finished was opened last week on Thursday night. In spite of the stormy weather there was a goodly crowd. The Saugerties life and drum corps offered their services which were gladly accepted. Martin's orchestra dispensed other music and Mr. Dillon, from New York, gave some songs and comic recitations and monologues which kept the audience in laughter. The ice cream and candy booth was well patronized and those who felt like it tripped the light to fantastic toe quite merrily. Altogether the opening was a success.

SAN JUAN DE ULLOA
PRISON PEST HOLE

Horror of Mexican Prison Described by Lieutenant McEntee in Letter to His Brother—Celebrating the Fourth in Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 15, 1914.

Dear Dwight:

Your letter of June 25th received. Am glad to hear from you again and to learn that you are all well. The fact that some of my old Kingston friends enjoyed the letter I wrote you, which appeared in the Freeman, is a reward worth while. If it gives pleasure to any of my friends there at home to read my letters to you they are certainly heartily welcome to do so as far as I am concerned.

Doubtless you have seen pictures of the San Juan de Ulloa prison, which is located in the Vera Cruz inner harbor, in the papers and magazines. While out taking lunch with Commander Bostwick, captain of the gun boat Nashville, the other day, we went all through this grim prison which has such an infamous history. It was built many generations ago by Charles the Fifth of Spain and has been a terror for centuries.

This prison is an immense fortress, having been built by the leading military engineers of the age and fulfilled every tactical requirement for defense. The walls are great masses of concrete, surrounded by a moat and protected by strong outworks. We pried into every part of this old relic of past ages. There are dungeons in this prison fortress where the sunlight has never entered. There are submarine cells where men have stood waist deep in water, while the tide was in, serving their weary sentence in this hell hole of a prison.

Ten years was considered a life sentence, the records show, as few men could stand the pain, misery, hardships and suffering of solitary confinement for a longer period than that.

The story of San Juan de Ulloa will never be told in full. It cost Charles the Fifth and succeeding kings of Spain many pieces of gold and was years in building. When completed it was fitted out with all the modern implements of torture known to human skill.

We passed through long galleries where hundreds of men were crowded together like sheep. Absolutely no provision made for sanitation and no light or ventilation except through a small opening in the thick ceiling. There are galleries in series where no sound of the outside world ever penetrates except the monotonous beating of the waves on the great outer walls.

There are underground cells for political prisoners upon whom the disfavor of the government has fallen, cells where the light of day never entered. We were accompanied by an orderly with a lantern and in these great cells the darkness was so dense that it seemed to hem us in, the rays from the lantern failing to penetrate the gloom for more than a few feet.

Many of the most distinguished men of Mexico have been confined in this fortress Porfirio Diaz himself, a brother of the late President Madero, Felix Diaz, candidate for president last October, Enrique Zepeda, reputed son of President Huerta, are a few of the notables of very recent times who have been incarcerated in this pest hole.

The American naval forces liberated all the political prisoners that were confined here when the port was taken. They flushed out the filth with fire hose, fumigated all the buildings which go to make up this great pile of masonry and had such a house cleaning as it never saw before. It is the fond and fervent hope of all Mexicans that this place be renovated kept clean and sanitary and do away with the underground cells.

One room was particularly curious. It seemed to be a room for the guards, as there was a row of pegs about the four walls on which to hang their accoutrements. Upon closer examination the pegs proved to be not the usual wooden peg but the large bone of the human arm.

We had a really glorious Fourth down here. It was safe and sane but full of fun. It did not look or sound like the Fourth until at noon when every ship in the harbor, American and foreign alike fired a salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the day. That brought the Vera Cruzonians hurrying to the doors and windows of their houses, wondering what the incomprehensible "Gringos" were up to in disturbing the echoes of a perfectly peaceful ordinary day in July.

All ships were dressed for the occasion. Another officer of my battalion and myself went out to the "North Dakota" for dinner in the evening. It was as the sun was setting, retreat was sounded and it was an impressive sight to see each ship stripped of its flag decorations almost in the same instant.

The army, navy and marine corps spent the day in athletic competition. The morning was taken up with swimming races and field day sports of the usual type. In the afternoon there was a final tug of war and ball game to determine the championship of the forces in Vera Cruz. By a process of elimination extending over a couple of weeks, the teams represented their respective branches on this day were the pick of that particular branch of the service.

The navy carried away the swimming cups, baseball championship and tug of war prize. The swimming interested me greatly. It was a wonderful exhibition of skill and a sight worth seeing.

The field sports were also interesting. They were pulled off promptly. One Mexican woman among those who went to see the Americans at play came near paying with her life for her curiosity. We have two troops of cavalry here you know and their contribution to the day's sport was a Roman race. She got in the middle of the track just near the finish of this race in which four teams did a Buffalo Bill stunt of riding two horses by, standing on their blanketed backs. One of these acrobatic cavalymen standing on two horses that were going like mad bore down on the woman who was frozen to the spot in terror at the approaching whirlwind. The rider had a fraction of a second to think what to do. He spread his legs apart until they were just about at right angles to his body, shoving his horses apart and skillfully guided them, one on either side of that poor Mexican woman, the rider passing over her like a streak and she was safe although a very much scared person. This won the hearts of all the sailor lads who were not used to such stunts. They were loud in their praises of the clever cavalymen.

The baseball game was the most enthusiastic spectacle that I have ever witnessed. Over 4,000 fans saw the game won by the navy. Not the least enthusiastic was Admiral Craddock of the British navy. Despite the terrific heat it was a contest. The result was in doubt until the last inning. The score was Navy, 4; Land Forces, 3. I never saw or heard such enthusiasm. Each side has its own band and good rosters those bands were too.

After the game the sailors section broke for the immense championship pennant. Headed by the band, playing that fine march "Anchors Away" and followed by the pennant bearing squad and nearly every sailor present marching lockstep around the field they marched cheering until they could cheer no more from utter exhaustion.

We had fireworks at 8 p. m. They were sent down from New Orleans for the occasion and set off from one of the navy tugs. It was a beautiful display that would rival in grandeur the Paine exhibitions at Coney Island. Among the fire works was a fire balloon. It made a fine ascension and soared high into the heavens. Then it took a bee line for the interior of the country and passed at a respectable height over the Mexican outposts, looking for all the world like one of those nocturnal airplanes which the Mexican City papers said the Gringos were sending across the lines to drop bombs on the Mexican forces. Whether it was

It is very hot down here but with all its disadvantages we are able to worry along and are waiting to see if we return to the states or go on through to Mexico City. My regard to all my inquiring friends and with love to you and yours.

WEST SAUGERTIES.

West Saugerties, July 30.—The new Country Club House although not quite finished was opened last week on Thursday night. In spite of the stormy weather there was a goodly crowd. The Saugerties life and drum corps offered their services which were gladly accepted. Martin's orchestra dispensed other music and Mr. Dillon from New York, gave some songs and comic recitations and monologues which kept the audience in laughter. The ice cream and candy booth was well patronized and those who felt like it tripped the light to fantastic toe quite merrily. Altogether the opening was a success.

Mrs. Brown has been spending a few days in camp with Ralph Hayes, his mother and friend.

Mrs. Freedom has gone for the summer to visit friends at Dresden Station, N. Y., on Lake Champlain.

WHAT AILS BASEBALL GAME?

Pretty Well Established That Something is Wrong With the Great Professional Pastime.

With Clark Griffith announcing that Connie Mack is a "cheap skate," the magnates of organized baseball bemoaning the present condition and prospects of the game, the players dissatisfied with their contracts, and discouraging reports of attendance from half a dozen or more towns, it seems to be pretty well established that something is wrong with the professional game, says the New York Sun. Everybody's nerves are on edge and the situation promises to become more mixed as the season wears on.

Is it beyond probability that the public has had an overdose of baseball? Not an overdose of playing, but of the business; of quarrels between owners, suits for the restraint of players, threats of retaliation and winter-long wrangles between this and that interest. Abuse of the Federal league and of the players who have signed its contracts, for one thing, has become very tiresome, and it is not the only factor at work to lessen public enthusiasm.

FOR SHORT DOUBLE-HEADERS

Critic Advocates Seven Innings Each Where Two Contests are Played on Same Afternoon.

Why not limit the double-header games to seven innings each? It's a scheme that has been tried out in the Southern leagues with great success.

Two seven-inning games in one afternoon would give the average fan just about as much baseball as he could comfortably absorb. It wouldn't force the ball player to the extreme limit of his endurance, and, best of all, it would enable the fan to get home in time for a warm dinner.

Cutting the double-header games to seven innings would do no one harm. It would do plenty of good. Cutting off four innings from an afternoon's baseball season would mean lessening the playing period about one hour and, therefore, the pastime would end before darkness settled over the land.

The season of double-headers is now upon us. Every fan is keen about taking in a bargain bill, but along about the fourth or fifth inning of the second game the exhibition becomes monotonous. Of course, the greatest majority of the fans stick to the bitter finish, but they stay not so much because their baseball appetite isn't satisfied, but because they want to see just how the game will finish.

Most double-headers begin about 2 p. m., allowing something over two hours for each game and a 15-minute intermission between combats. It means that play doesn't end until about 6:30. That means that the fan doesn't get home until from 7:15 to 8 p. m., owing to the delay in getting out of the crowded park and the usual delay caused by the slow moving of a fleet of special street cars. And every housewife is fully agreed that 7:15 to 8 p. m. is "too darned late for any man to expect his wife to keep dinner simmering."

If the games were cut two innings each the playing period would be lessened about an hour, which would mean that the final innings of the second game would not have to be played by torchlight and that father would get home on time to dine with the rest of the family.

The seven-inning double-header idea probably will prove to be a popular one with the fans, and it is likely that if the agitation assumes sufficient voice that the ruling powers in baseball will hear it and amend their laws so that seven-inning double-headers will be the rule starting with the 1916 season.

Josh Devore is getting to be a great traveler around the National league circuit. Josh played in the outfield for the Giants for several seasons and then went to the Cincinnati Reds in a trade. Later he bobbed up in Philadelphia with Charley Dooan's team. Now Josh has gone to the Boston Braves, where he is doing regular service in the outer garden. The former Giant still retains his batting eye, as he has a mark of .308 for 30 games.

That means that the fan doesn't get home until from 7:15 to 8 p. m., owing to the delay in getting out of the crowded park and the usual delay caused by the slow moving of a fleet of special street cars. And every housewife is fully agreed that 7:15 to 8 p. m. is "too darned late for any man to expect his wife to keep dinner simmering."

If the games were cut two innings each the playing period would be lessened about an hour, which would mean that the final innings of the second game would not have to be played by torchlight and that father would get home on time to dine with the rest of the family.

The seven-inning double-header idea probably will prove to be a popular one with the fans, and it is likely that if the agitation assumes sufficient voice that the ruling powers in baseball will hear it and amend their laws so that seven-inning double-headers will be the rule starting with the 1916 season.

Hot Weather Hygiene.

In hot weather danger sometimes arises for the children in a faulty condition of the food. This is especially the case with milk, and it is necessary to see that the milk used comes from a guaranteed source and that it is kept under hygienic conditions in the house.

Fruit, too, becomes a danger, and the eating of unripe or overripe fruit is a very common cause of nursery ailments.

Now to consider the question of medicine and dieting when the first warm weather appears.

For the former, when circumstances render it necessary, magnesia may be safely recommended, provided it is in a suitable form for children's use. Any obvious disturbance in the internal arrangements should be counteracted by this in preference to castor oil or even olive oil, for both have a tendency to heat the blood, a tendency which is counteracted in magnesia.

To the older children a simple saline draft may often be given with advantage.

A good, homely remedy is made by stewing prunes in water in which some senna pods have been soaked, one ounce of the pods being put into a pint of boiling water and left until the water is cold. Strain the mixture then and stew one pound of prunes in it, adding four or five tablespoonfuls of lemon syrup, then pass the mixture through a sieve and keep it in a well stoppered bottle, giving one teaspoonful as a dose each morning. It is quite nice to take and generally liked by children.

When the Youngsters Travel.

Children traveling can all too easily prove a bore to every one. On ship-board it is easy to keep them out of the way. On some of the ships, of course, special nurseries and playrooms are provided. Even when this is not the case the children can be kept happily occupied with books and toys in their deck chairs or else can be taken for walks about the deck. But they should not be allowed to romp up and down the deck, running thoughtlessly into other pedestrians and stumbling rudely against the deck chairs.

Children in a train are harder to take care of. Whatever their own discomfort may be, don't allow them to romp up and down the aisles. If they become very restless they may walk up and down the aisles a few times without disturbing any one if they can be trusted to be quiet and mannerly.

For the rest interesting games and books that can be enjoyed in their seats are provided for their entertainment. Colored crayons, pencil and other paper games, games of cards—like "authors"—paper dolls and the other sort of dolls and various word games that can be directed by an elder member of the party are all good entertainment for child travelers.

Summer Drinks For Children.

Barley water when very carefully prepared is a first rate drink for children in hot weather and makes a welcome change from plain water or milk and water. Lemonade should be only very sparingly given them, and then only when carefully made with fresh lemons.

A child should be allowed to drink as much as it likes either of barley water or plain cold filtered water. The extra perspiration caused by the hot weather will often induce thirst, and the need nature makes felt in this way should be met.

In hot weather, too, when there is lassitude or signs of ill health, one of the excellent patent foods should be given for a time. In this way the nutrient required which is not given by the ordinary diet will be obtained, for it is no use to force a child to eat more than it wants at ordinary meals—a very common nursery mistake in the first warm weather.

It is quite surprising to find the difference which a cup of malted milk once or twice a day and a meal of some good patent food for supper will make, even in a few days, in a child who is peevish and generally out of sorts.

Fruit For the Little Ones.

The question of fruit for children is a vexed one, and it is well to put parents on their guard. Really fresh fruit, either raw or cooked, provided it is in good condition and free from skins, strings and pips, is excellent for the little ones.

Rhubarb is a very valuable nursery food. It should be carefully rubbed through a sieve after having been stewed with raw brown sugar for young children. Then it can be given freely, even to tines from eighteen months onward, especially if beaten up with custard. Indeed, this form of simple "food" makes a first rate nursery pudding and one much appreciated.

Raw fruit except bananas is rather at a premium now, but these should have the fibrous strings adhering to them carefully removed before being given to children, while for babies under two and one-half years they should be mashed up with a little cream.

Food Between Meals.

Give the children a cupful of warm liquid—soup or milk—if they come in hungry. It is nourishing and doesn't spoil their dinners.

Had Made Something.

"Did yiz ever make iny money back in harses, Mulligan?" "Sure, Oi made a hundred dollars wance." "How did rez do ut?" "Oi backed him down cellar awn thin sued th' mon for lavin' th' dure open."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

AS this department is widely read by milk producers as well as by other farmers, information about the newer fodder crops will be appreciated. The keeping up of a steady milk supply without paying out too large a percentage of the farm earnings for millstuffs is one of the most serious problems of the day. Its solution in a wise way will spell success for many a struggling farmer.

Sox beans make a rich late summer pasture, a good soiling crop, a splendid ensilage crop and a cured hay equal in palatability and feeding value to alfalfa hay. They yield twenty to thirty bushels of seed per acre, worth $2 to $3 per bushel, and can be ground into meal that will take the place of cottonseed meal, oil meal, tankage, gluten or other high class concentrates at much less cost.

Owing to their rapid growth soy beans are an admirable catch crop to follow wheat, oats, crimson clover, potatoes or other early crops. They greatly improve the condition of the soil upon which they grow and enrich its store of nitrogen and humus.

As compared with the valuable and widely popular cowpeas, soy beans have a wider range of usefulness, are more easily cured for hay, much more easily harvested and thrashed for seed, yield more seed, ripen more evenly, are more nutritious, command a better price, are less sensitive to frost, lose less in handling of the hay, crack less in thrashing, are less likely to be attacked by weevil and the roots and stubble leave more nitrogen and humus in the soil. Cowpeas have the one superior virtue of making a heavier yield on a poor, sandy soil.

As a main crop soy beans ten days after corn planting time as a catch crop as soon as the prior crop is off the land. If drilled in rows to be cultivated one-third of a bushel will seed an acre; if drilled solid, like wheat, use six pecks.

For hay, cut when the pods are fully formed; for seed, cut when the plants begin to turn yellow, cure as for hay and thrash. The thrashed forage will be eaten greedily by horses and cattle, and they will thrive on it. At present prices soy beans are one of the most profitable crops that can be grown, and they fit admirably into almost any good system of crop rotation.

After a crop of rye or oats is taken off in the early summer there is plenty of time to disk or plow the field and sow soy beans for a late summer crop. It can be used as pasture.

A still newer crop of great value to live stock owners is called guar. If this fodder crop proves to be all that is claimed for it some of the others will be relegated to the background.

Guar is described as an erect annual, reaching a height of three to four feet in an arid country and five to seven feet in the rain belt. As a land improver it ranks with the cowpeas, and as a forage plant it is said to equal alfalfa. Just imagine the amount of forage in a crop of alfalfa six feet high! Guar is said to produce enormous quantities of seed—twenty to thirty bushels per acre, even in a dry country, and proportionately larger yields in humid countries.

Dairymen need a variety of fodder crops. With summer droughts always possible it is a good plan to have a field of rye and clover sown in the fall. This, like the first cutting of alfalfa, will be ready quite early. For mid-summer emergencies it is well to have soy beans, cowpeas, millet or alfalfa. Cowpeas and oats may be sown together for a late hay crop and usually give satisfactory results.

Condensed Milk For Colts.

The most trying times in the life of the young horse are during the hot months of summer, and again in early fall just after it has been weaned. In most parts of the country there is more or less of a drought in the late summer, and the mare is unable to supply enough milk to sustain the foal in a healthy and growing condition. In addition to this the flies at that period of the year annoy the young animal to such an extent as materially to affect its vitality.

To overcome these obstacles some breeders stable the mare and colt during the day and supply the loss of pasture by feeding the mare grain and freshly cut hay. But in a majority of cases the mare, with her young foal, is allowed to run at pasture with no additional feed.

A scheme that has been found to give entire satisfaction in such cases is to empty a can of condensed milk into a pail of water and allow the foal to drink some of this mixture two or three times a day. After the foal has been weaned this system is especially effective, and as the colt is then older and stronger it will drink a palful both night and morning. The youngsters soon learn to like it. When purchased by the case condensed milk has been found to be quite economical, while there is little doubt that as a flesh making food it is almost without an equal.—Country Gentleman.

Sweet Grass.

We never know how much sweetness there is in grass till it is cut. Severed from the root, it gives out a perfume which the garden itself can hardly rival. Misfortune instead of making us bitter, should bring out the sweetness of the spirit, like the fragrance of the mown grass.

Economies.

"Why don't you try to look more neat?" "I'm economizin'," replied Plodding Pete. "I jes' heard about de money a railroad kin save by not washin' de car windows. Jes' imagine de expense dis nation could cut out by boycottin' soap!"

Salt as Cleaner.

To clear willow furniture scrub each piece well with a coarse brush and water that is strongly saturated with salt, then dry with a soft cloth. Salt not only cleans willowware, but prevents it from turning yellow. Straw matting may be most successfully cleaned in the same way.

The Lure of the Cash.

LONG'S ASSAILANTS SEEN AT PHOENICIA

Both Caught but One Escaped and Took to the Woods—Pursuit With Bloodhounds Was in Vain.

The two Italians who emptied the contents of a Colt revolver into the Rev. L. R. Long, superintendent of schools at Margaretville on Tuesday evening, were caught about 9 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Phoenicia station. They were seen coming down the railroad track from the scene of the shooting, about 5 o'clock and were recognized by some one around the place, who notified Mr. Burger, the village constable, who with a few others started for the station to take the two Italians into custody. They placed them under arrest but as quick as this was done both of them started on a fast run for the mountains, back of the station, with the constable and helpers after them. One of them was caught but the other one has not been found as yet. The Margaretville authorities were notified that the men had been found and that one had been captured and the other one had escaped. They immediately came to Phoenicia by automobile, bringing with them two bloodhounds, and started on the chase up the mountain for the escaped prisoner, but the two dogs were unable to take up the scent, and consequently the one was not captured.

The one that was caught was taken back to Margaretville Wednesday night and locked up, and in the mean while the constable at Phoenicia and the police authorities at Margaretville kept up the hunt, and are still searching the mountain for the Italian that escaped. They are sure that he is at present somewhere in the mountains and expect to capture him before night.

Photograph made of Serbian soldiers on way to recent Balkan war. Vienna, July 30.—Although outnumbered more than 2 to 1 the Serbian army will put up a mighty resistance to the Austrian invaders. National pride has been aroused in Serbia through that country's victories over Bulgaria and Roumania in the second Balkan war. In the first Balkan war practically all the important battles were won by the Serbians. St. Petersburg, July 30.—Czar Nicholas of Russia is the man who holds the power to throw all Europe into war. The first movement of Russian troops outside that country's borders for the purpose of aiding the Serbians in their war with Austria, will be the signal for Germany and Italy to take up arms in Austria's behalf. France and England, who with Russia make up the triple entente, would be forced to stand by their ally.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Members of the "B. G." Club enjoyed a motor boat sail to Poughkeepsie.

Bathing on the shores of the Hudson is greatly enjoyed by many of our Kingston people.

A cargo of cinders for use in the concrete work on the new high school is being unloaded at Hiltebrand's dock on Ferry street.

Policeman Phinney found a bicycle on Broadway on Wednesday evening which he left at police headquarters where the owner may obtain it.

The dance to have been held at the Oriental pavilion at Kingston Point Tuesday evening will be held this evening. Music by Muller's orchestra.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Presbyterian Church will hold an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. B. J. Hornbaker, 31 Oak street, on Friday, July 31, from 3 to 5 o'clock. As a proposition of importance must be brought before the society a short business session will be held at this meeting.

LOCAL BASEBALL DOINGS.

The Young Giants of Delaware avenue defeated the Pirates on Wednesday morning in a game of baseball, the score being 14 to 11. Boyd pitched for the Pirates, but was hit freely. The battery for the Giants were Gallagher, Scanlon and Dusan; for the Pirates, Boyd, Loss and Albrecht. The features of the game were the pitching of Scanlon and the batting of T. Murray. The Giants have defeated the Pirates 5 out of 7 games.

ELUSIVE BOB VEAL.

Has Someone a Delusion or is a Joker Abroad?

Is bob veal being slaughtered in Rondout or is some one trying to hoax members of the board of health? is a question that some of the members of the board would like answered. For some time past a number of telephone communications have been sent into various members of the board asking them to drop in on such and such a butcher in the lower section of the city and they would catch the butcher slaughtering bob veal. As soon as the telephone message was received the member of the board would hurry to Rondout only to find that he had made a wild goose chase. Within the past few days Charles L. McBride has been called to Rondout to investigate complaints received over the telephone, but all without results as far as catching any one killing bob veal was concerned. As many of the members of the board of health have been recently appointed special police it will go hard with any one found telephoning in a fake complaint as they have the power to make arrests.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 30.—There was a resumption of the liquidation movement in the beginning of trading on the stock market today, stocks being supplied both by European and local commission houses and severe losses were sustained throughout the list in the early trading. The sharpest break was in Canadian Pacific, which yielded over five points to 160, with losses in other issues from 3 to 4 points. Union Pacific declined to 118 against 120 at the close yesterday and St. Paul dropped 2½ to 89½, and losses of over two points were sustained in United States Steel Common Amalgamated Copper, Central Leather and Baltimore & Ohio. Many of the low priced stocks, including Chino Copper, also yielded over two points. There was no exception to the declines in the early trading but before the end of the first fifteen minutes the selling wave diminished and buying appeared, which caused rallies of a point or more. Canadian Pacific, after selling at 160, rose to 161½, and upturns of about a point over the low levels of the opening were made in Reading, St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio and Steel Common. The curb market was weak.

Pressure increased in the afternoon with the liquidation fully equal to the foreign selling. Reading was one of the weakest features, selling at 143 and showing a loss of 11 points for the day. Other severe declines also were sustained in Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, Steel Common and the group of miscellaneous sellers. U. S. Steel Common yielded to 52½, a loss of more than 4 points, and proportionate declines were sustained in New York Central, Northern Pacific and St. Paul. General Motors fell to 69, a loss of six points, while many low priced issues, including American Ice Securities, Pressed Steel Car and Chicago Great Western Pfd., showed losses of four to five points.

2:30 p. m.—In the late trading Canadian Pacific fell to 160½ and a majority of other issues ranged below the early afternoon prices. Steel sold at 52½, Union Pacific at 116½, Reading, 144½; Southern Pacific, 86½ and New York Central at 79½.

The stock market was demoralized just before the close. Prices crumpled rapidly. Steel Common sold at 50½ and Canadian Pacific at 157.

Fearing that its meeting might be misconstrued and financial conditions suffer as a result, the clearing house committee this afternoon announced that its summons for a special session had been cancelled.

The stock market closed weak and demoralized. Governments unchanged; other bonds irregular.

ELUSIVE BOB VEAL.

Has Someone a Delusion or is a Joker Abroad?

Is bob veal being slaughtered in Rondout or is some one trying to hoax members of the board of health? is a question that some of the members of the board would like answered. For some time past a number of telephone communications have been sent into various members of the board asking them to drop in on such and such a butcher in the lower section of the city and they would catch the butcher slaughtering bob veal. As soon as the telephone message was received the member of the board would hurry to Rondout only to find that he had made a wild goose chase. Within the past few days Charles L. McBride has been called to Rondout to investigate complaints received over the telephone, but all without results as far as catching any one killing bob veal was concerned. As many of the members of the board of health have been recently appointed special police it will go hard with any one found telephoning in a fake complaint as they have the power to make arrests.

John Somerville of Brooklyn died on Wednesday afternoon at the Kingston City Hospital. The remains were taken in charge by Undertaker N. D. J. Murphy and shipped to his home for funeral and interment that evening.

Emma M. Jerolimov died this morning at the residence of William H. Curry, No. 125 Highland avenue, aged 62 years. The funeral was held this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the mortuary chapel of A. Carr & Son. The interment will be in Albany Rural Cemetery.

Mrs. Philip W. Britt, sister of Nelson Longyear of this city died yesterday at her home in Hartford, Connecticut. Mrs. Britt was in her eightieth year and is survived by one brother, Nelson Longyear of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. Minnie Griffin of Hartford Conn. The funeral will be held this afternoon at Hartford.

John Spencer, 12 years old, a son of Mrs. Carrie Spencer of Poughkeepsie, was injured in a bicycle accident at Hopewell Junction on Tuesday and died at Vassar Hospital Wednesday morning as a result of his injuries. The father told the doctors that he was riding down a hill when he lost control of his bicycle and was hurled off.

Mrs. Jane Robinson, wife of George C. Robinson, died on Wednesday at her home in Pine Bush, aged 31 years. She was a native of Wurtsboro and spent her young life there and at Ellenville. Her husband and two sisters, Mrs. Ira Schoonmaker of Ellenville and Mrs. David DeGraw of Cornwall, survive. The funeral will be held Friday with interment at Cold Spring on Saturday.

James Carraway, colored, employed on the Alpha Brick & Holding Company yard at Porterville, died early Wednesday morning from an attack of acute nephritis. He was 21 years old and a native of Norfolk, Virginia. The funeral was held that afternoon from Seamon Brothers Company funeral chapel, with interment in the Main street cemetery at Saugerties. The Rev. George A. Shahan conducted the funeral services.

Mrs. Gertrude Young died on Tuesday at her home in Middletown, aged 92 years. She was a native of Holland and came to this country in 1855, settling at Ellenville, where she lived until 1909. That year she moved to Middletown. Deceased is survived by one son, Cornelius Young of Ellenville, and three daughters, Mrs. Jane Bradstreet of Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. Hannah Cummings of Butte, Montana, and Mrs. Edwin Griffiths of Middletown.

A large straw load from the boarding house of Joseph Flinter at Spring Glen drove to Ellenville Thursday evening at 9:30. While driving about the village one of the boarders, Mrs. Michael Mann, of New York, was attacked with acute indigestion. Dr. Witkow was called but before the woman could be taken to his office she suffered a stroke of apoplexy and died in a few minutes on the wagon. Mrs. Mann was 54 years old, and was a resident of the Bronx, New York. Undertaker Wood took charge of the body and sent it to New York today for burial.

Newton Rockwell, a well known citizen of the town of Wardsburg, died at Kerhonkson Wednesday evening. Mr. Rockwell was born at Ellenville, a son of John Rockwell and Ann Newing. For many years he kept a jewelry store in Ellenville. Several years ago he moved to Kerhonkson, where for some years he ran the hotel now of Morse & Collins. For many years he was town assessor and at the time of his death town postmaster. Surviving are one son, H. C. Rockwell, four sisters and one brother. Funeral services in charge of Mason Lodge will be held at the Episcopal Church, Ellenville, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Fantinekill Cemetery.

The body of Elliott Marshall, the Wall street lawyer, who disappeared a week ago and for whom a country wide search was made, was found on Wednesday by Sandy Hook bay two fishermen. His money and jewelry were gone but he had a ticket for Atlantic Highlands. His friends think he must have been blown off the boat during a heavy gale which prevailed at the time he boarded the boat. It is also believed that he was out of his mind, as several years ago he came to Dr. Sahler's sanitarium for examination and was found to be suffering from neurasthenia bordering on melancholia. At the time a woman was drowned hereabouts Mr. Marshall is alleged to have said, "There's one poor soul who is free from suffering."

The Polar Star.

As is well known to most readers, the north star marks the point in the sky toward which the axes (poles) of the earth point. But the poles have another motion called "precession" (much like the secondary motion of a spinning top), by which the ever changing poles describe a big circle in the sky, reaching from the present north star across to Vega. It requires over 25,000 years to complete that circle, and during that time numerous stars will in turn inherit the title of north star. Eleven thousand years hence the job will fall to Vega, and a most worthy holder of that most important position in the sky he will be. When that time comes Polaris will be almost forgotten.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Windmill of Great Power.

A windmill, which is said to be the largest of its kind in the world, has lately been brought into use at Harlingen, Friesland, for draining a tract of lowland redeemed from the sea by high embankments, with an area of 1,850 acres.

Sacred Bangles.

One of the oldest and most curious of existing industries is the making of narrow rings or bracelets, called bangles, from the chank, or sacred shell of the Hindus. This conch-Turkineella pyrum, Linn.—is found chiefly at a depth of about two fathoms in the gulf straits of Manar, and about 2,000,000 of the shells are exported annually to Calcutta. So important is the bangle of the Hindu women that J. Hornell, representing the Madras government, has specially investigated the industry. Tracing the early history of chank ornaments, Mr. Hornell is unable to assign prehistoric specimens in the Madras museum to the later stone age, as had been previously done, but believes marks on some of them were made by metal implements. He has found, however, remains of ancient bangle factories scattered over the greater part of India. Bangle cutting is now confined almost entirely to Bengal, and it proves to be in flourishing condition in spite of the growing taste for gold ornaments.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Ellenville, July 30.—A large crowd was out on the streets Tuesday evening to greet the two local fire companies who were to parade.

Scorebys had as their guests the Walden fire and drum corps. They were entertained at the Mitchell House and after supper they headed fifty-two members of Scorebys and marched on the sidewalk from the Bloomer street, down Center to Circle avenue, Park street back to Center and were obliged, on account of heavy rain falling, to disband instead of giving the drill they expected to. Pioneers did not parade on account of the weather conditions. Many of the private residences on the line of march were handsomely decorated. Wednesday morning at 7:20, by special train, the two fire companies left for Port Jervis where Pioneers with Captain's band were to be the guests of Neverick Steamer Company, and the Scorebys the guests of Mahogmock hook and ladder company, and take part in the big parade. A number of the villagers and nearby town people also joined the big day in Port Jervis.

GERMAN ULTIMATUM SENT TO RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Berlin, July 30.—Germany has sent an ultimatum to Russia giving the Czar 24 hours to explain what Russia means by the mobilization of troops.

The crisis which Germany is facing was considered very grave this evening. Prince Henry, Gen. Von Moltke and several high personages in both army and naval circles were in conference and reports were circulated that the mobilization of the army and navy had been ordered, although these reports were contradicted in official circles.

The populace, however, believes that war is coming. Gold is disappearing fast from circulation, there are many runs on banks, the sudden rise in prices on food-stuffs and the prospects of banks calling in loans have had a panicky effect upon the people.

Enthusiasm is rampant everywhere. The people, while deploring the depressing circumstances, that have already arisen, since the Austrian declaration of war, are in the wildest excitement. So great was the excitement at Breslau that the authorities issued an order forbidding processions.

Officers on leave are returning to garrisons on all trains. Russians are leaving Germany by thousands and returning to their home country. All trains from France are bringing in hundreds of German women and children.

MME. CAILLAUX A NERVOUS WRECK AFTER ACQUITTAL.

Mme. Henriette Caillaux, Paris, July 30.—Mme. Caillaux, wife of the former premier, who was acquitted Tuesday of the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, still suffers from the tremendous nervous strain of her trial. M. Caillaux has announced his intention of retiring from public life in an effort to spend the rest of his days in peace and quiet. When Mme. Caillaux's condition warrants it, she will go with her husband to spend the remainder of the summer at the Caillaux villa.

Dean Rummell Arrives Home.

The Very Rev. Joseph F. Rummell, D. D., rector of St. Peter's Church, arrived in New York from Europe on Wednesday. Dean Rummell came up to Kingston today and was warmly greeted by his friends and parishioners. He has been spending several months in Europe and the Holy Land. On Sunday Dean Rummell will resume his charge of services at St. Peter's Church. To his acquaintances he said he was extremely well after his vacation.

The Clinton Avenue M. E. Church will hold regular services during the entire summer. The pastor of the church, the Rev. George Cranston, will preach on each Sunday excepting August 9 and 16. On the ninth the Rev. J. J. Henry of Tarrytown will preach and on the sixteenth the pulpit will be supplied by the Rev. A. A. Vrandenburg of Pawling, N. Y. The evening services will not be extended longer than one hour.

AUSTRIAN AMBASSADOR HAS NO FEAR OF ALL-GERMAN WAR.

Constantin Theodor Dumba, Boston, Mass., July 30.—"It was inevitable," said Dr. Dumba, Austrian minister to the United States, speaking of Austria's declaration of war against Serbia. "I am not surprised. It should be short and sharp. It should be a summary end to the Balkan problem. Austria has shown great patience in dealing with Serbia. It is high time that hot bed of revolt and anarchy was purged."

The Man of The Merchant

He Proved His Courage and Daring.

I.

No sooner did the senior engineer hear the peremptory summons than he scurried from the crowded wardroom.

"Poor devil! Did you notice his face, Bellamy?" said the second engineer, addressing the florid paymaster. "He went as pale as death. When the device does Torsbell eat and sleep, Naylen? He never seems to be off duty."

The surgeon twitched his spruce eyebrows.

"Oh, Mebbe, our senior engineer—our man of the merchant marine!" said he in his usual flippant, exasperating tone. "He'll go the same as Chislehurst if worries don't cease. No human being, much less Torsbell, can stand for any length of time the state of affairs in this boat's engine room and stokeholds. It's enough to drive any man mad!"

"Chisle is really not well, then? We all know the complaint of Patten of the Farin Furnace, as the to-castle terms her."

Naylen shrugged his shoulders. "Our staff engineer went into sick bay to let this R. N. R. fellow shine, did he?" was his tart rejoinder. "Too much strain and unrest have knocked him off his legs. And so Mebbe is the man we must depend on now."

Said the paymaster in his big, raucous voice: "That is what happens with these understaffed engine rooms and insufficient repairs. Here we are, the latest of the lame ducks in the division and tailfin' off the column, with a reserve chap out of an easy, cozy, ten knot merchantman handling our engines, and rickety old machines they are. God alone knows what'll happen with him and his untired nerve when we pick the enemy up again!"

"A jolly good thing for us the enemy are just as much worried with breakdowns," was the consoling remark from the other end of the table. "The Rurik, the Freya, the Jena and—"

"I wouldn't indict the dockyard for the insufficient repairs point, Bellamy," interrupted the second. "My lords were responsible. They wouldn't enlarge the yards, make new ones or lease out repairs, so as to have all the necessary work for mobilization coped with adequately. But it is odd how she was passed out with the starboard cylinder cover not remedied. Of course nobody'll be held responsible, as usual!"

Bellamy nodded, turning from scolding the harassed steward. He replied slowly. "But yet when an R. N. R. fellow can pop up and take seniority over the regular service, as in this boat, you can't expect—"

"Oh, here we are again!" the second broke in with. "Jealousies as usual. Torsbell is as fit as any engineer. By George," he cried, listening intently, "the engines are slowin' down!"

II.

Torsbell had approached Captain Widdrington and the "first," who lingered in the chart house discussing recent instructions. The senior engineer had coughed slightly to intimate his presence. The captain looked up, a frown sweeping his hard face on marking him.

"Sir," cried the engineer, "the port—"

"One moment, sir!" was the short answer. "This isn't a steam bus." And Torsbell, again saluting, had stepped back, his pallid face blood red and his teeth hard clinched and gritting. The wary, diplomatic first just then cheerily nodded aside to him.

He let himself rock to the vessel's jiggling among the cumbersomes masses of sea. Since he had joined, off the way-laid liner, his had been hard luck. He felt acutely the general sentiment against him; but notwithstanding all, his mettle was yet strong. It was the snobbish crowd in the wardroom and the unpleasant bearing of his subordinates that caused his discomfort of mind.

Suddenly he had held in his breath and unwittingly stepped toward the bridge ladder. The first drew himself back from the chart, darting a look of surprise at Torsbell. But the captain's steel blue eyes flamed with sudden anger.

"Good heavens, sir! Your engines aren't slowing down?"

Torsbell saluted. "Port air pump, sir."

"This drives a man mad!" cried Widdrington, crashing his big fist upon the table. "Nothing but defects, defects! Can you drive engines at all, you miserable merchantman? What d'ye want to slacken down to? What's wrong this time? You?"

That second came a tremendous jarring and crunching beneath their feet. The great ship was shaken like a thing of straw. An appalling hammering followed, chaotic and deafening. Gray steam surged through hatchways, ventilators and companions.

The senior engineer had rushed from the bridge. As he raced amidships he snatched the sacking off the backs of some of the "black squad" dumping ashes overboard, grabbed at a quartermaster's oilskins and shoved them all upon him.

"Garret an' Eppurn an' Mr. Jerroli in port alleyway!" was the answer to his shout from the artificers now in safety. It reached his ear as he stepped down into the uproar of smashing, clashing metal.

With heightened anxiety and fear, Widdrington stared at the steam still outpouring. The thunderous clanking of ponderous machinery galloping loose beat frightfully into his ear. With much more of it bilge plates would be started.

It was then that a bear-eyed, cinder-buried signalman came hurrying along. "Flagship flagin' out 'Chase' signals, sir!" was his report.

III.

When Torsbell again dragged himself on the bridge he was a mere unshapely mass, held together by swaths of lint. Widdrington stepped hastily to him and helped him up the last rungs of the ladder. The captain looked into the seamed and scalded face, nearly hidden beneath bandages. Said he heartily: "By heavens, ye've pluck! These men owe their lives to you. Ye've pluck." And with this certificate forthcoming at last for service done he dismissed the case for heroism.

"But about this breakdown—what can you do? Our east wing scouts are in touch with the enemy, and here am I not doing five knots. Never a shot to be fired, and ahead they've got all the work. Can you do nothing with these starboard engines?"

"They are in a pretty bad fix, but I'll do my best to work them for a time at least."

The senior engineer staggered to a deep wallow of the stricken vessel as a tumultuous swell tilted her casemated broadside. He would have fallen headlong if the officers had not sprung forward and caught him under the arms. He moaned. "My knee! My knee! It's smashed!"

Half an hour later he was superintending his officers and men, who, stripped to their trousers, were clearing away the wreck. Every order that issued peremptorily from his blanched lips went full and fair to the mark and afforded succinct knowledge and confidence to the grimy, sweating workers. Theirs were unbegrudged obedience and execution, for each now understood his man. Hunched shouldered, he was through physical agonies; yet, knowing that he held the lives of 700 men and that great, glorious ship in his hand, he maintained his will indomitable. Not a detail escaped his eye or slipped his brain.

IV.

Night had long since dropped. The immense boat lay lurching from side to side, plunging wildly under the tons of green seas that thudded like battering rams against her bows and forecastle what time the high walled swell broke roaring.

"Make for northwest trade patrol. Regain nearest port. Much regret breakdown," had been the sorely harassed vice admiral's latest message.

Captain Widdrington, a barrel swathed in shawls and many waterproofs, was with the first and third lieutenants on the afterbridge. Wearily he turned from straining his eyes over the indistinct summits of yeasty seas and cleared the brine off his face and bushy eyebrows with the flat of his left hand. He was cautiously making his way up the bridge when suddenly he stopped short. A quartermaster shouted, "D'ye hear that, sir?"

A faint boom had rung through the stormy wind, ominous, like to a dying world's last echo.

The first dodged a scattered spout of sea. "If the enemy drive down on us will you fight, sir?"

"Yes, by heavens! As well go down fightin' as not. If we can work ship it's the very weather for us. See Torsbell. I must risk the port engines."

And as Wingeat carefully made his way on deck "Firin' east sou'east!" was the lookout's hail.

He climbed down the thirty odd feet of slippery ladder into the maze of motionless machinery. As he touched the senior engineer on the elbow he noted his intent and quivering lips.

"Can't say," was the answer. "Mebbe we will. But every man is workin' his best. If it is in my power the starboard mills 'll run."

"If we can't steam God help us!" ejaculated the first.

V.

As the luckless warship flung herself about the iron flooring beneath the wornout men seethed wither and thither, throwing them off their feet. She evened herself in a broad valley of the mountainous sea wastes.

Torsbell yelled: "Let her go! Let her go!"

A breaking bill of wild water was hurling itself on the weather quarter just as the chains rattled through the blocks. Torsbell lurched forward and then, to the boat's violent heeling, toppled helplessly between the hinder column of the intermediate engine and the banging mass of cylinder gear.

"Lower! Lower! Never mind me!" came in an intense shriek. Their racked and knotted arms pulled desperately, and the disconnected workings were lowered clear down to the floor plates.

The maimed and bleeding mass of flesh that had been Torsbell, R. N. R., was slipping into the crank pit, but Jerroli and some others held it fast. And it came that as the waning voice moaned "Give her steam! Give her steam! Mind the links!" the mad pealing of the telegraph made his assistant leap to the starting engine. The two cut off scouts of the enemy were opening a heavy cannonading.

The dull grunting of guns and the quickening thud of his engines the senior engineer did not hear. Cried Naylen, on his knees beside him, "The best man among us, and we never knew it!"

The fighting ship went bravely into action, but the man of the merchant marine would never again give ear.

Her Assistant.

The authoress of whom Fliegende Blatter tells had said that she was very happy in her married life.

"I find my husband such a help!" she added fervently.

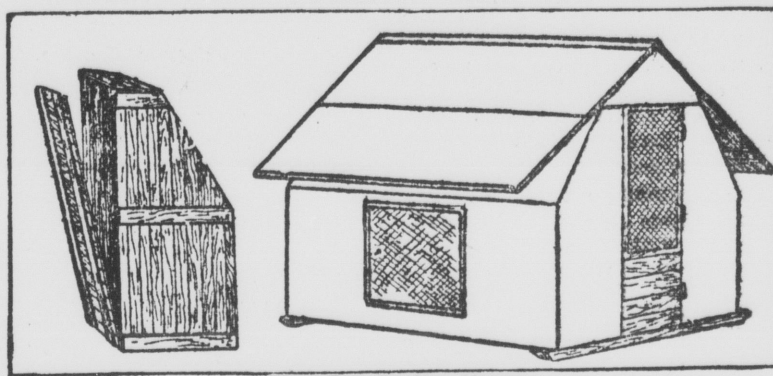

"Indeed!" said her friend. "Does he cook or write?"

Piano-Box Poultry House.

A useful poultry house is made by removing the backs and tops of two piano boxes of the same size and placing them back to back, leaving a sufficient space between to allow for a door, the opposite end being boarded up. A roof and floor is easily put in, and window space knocked out on the south side. The sides and roof may be papered on the outside.

MANAGING THE TURKEY

ALL HAVE STREAK OF WILDNESS IN THEIR NATURES.

Birds Will Not Do Well if There Is Too Much Management in Raising—Free Range Is One of Most Important Factors.

The turkey is the only one of our domestic fowls that originated in America. While the chicken has been bred up from the wild jungle cocks and hens of Southern Asia, the white men found the turkey here when they came. And the turkey has changed very little in the three or four centuries since the first Caucasian came to America.

Turkeys all have a streak of wildness in their natures. A turkey hen will always do better when she is allowed to steal her nest. If left undisturbed she will bring off much better hatches than if interfered with by well-meaning poultry keepers, says a Kentucky writer in Farm Progress. These wild birds resent interference, and many times I have known them to desert their nests when molested.

I always let them alone until after the brood has been brought off. In their wild state they are able to rear their young very well, as they run in woods and along streams where the underbrush and weeds do not interfere with them. In fields and around farm houses it is best to keep them for a week or ten days after hatching. The young turks are not able to stand being dragged through wet grass and weeds wet with dew.

Anyone who understands turkey nature can make some profit from the breeding of these birds if there is room for them to have considerable range. As a bird for yards and coops the turkey is distinctly out of place. I have never known anyone to raise them successfully in confinement, and doubt if such a thing is possible.

Akin to Wild Turkey.

The bronze turkey is very closely akin to the wild turkey still found in small flocks in various parts of the country. When Columbus returned to Spain after his first voyage to America he took with him a few of these beautiful birds. Later voyagers took a great many of them to Spain, and from there they were taken to England.

The Old World has been raising these domesticated birds longer than we have, but four centuries of confinement and breeding have failed to breed all the wildness out of their natures.

The bronze turkey, direct descendant of the wild turkeys of tropical and subtropical America, is the largest of these birds now grown. The old traits of wildness, caution and a tendency to hide when about to set, are still characteristic of the bird. Some of the bronze turkeys reach a weight of 45 pounds, which seems greater than any birds of the wild varieties. Careful and selective breeding has increased the weight and deepened the colorings and plumage markings.

Dark eyes, coppery bronze and glistening black plumage, offset and heightened by white markings at the feather tips, are some of the most notable characteristics of the bronze turkey. The basic color of the plumage is black, and over this plays a combination of iridescent greens and coppery lights.

HINTS FOR THE DUCK RAISER

Twenty Ducklings in a Flock Is Plenty as They Are Rather Easily Injured by Overcrowding.

Do not overcrowd the ducklings. Twenty in a flock is quite enough. Their joints are very tender and easily slipped out of place and for this reason it is not safe to keep too many in a yard. It is also a bad plan to allow other stock to run with them.

When frightened a fat duckling is apt to fall over on its back and if not turned over it will lie there and die as it cannot get up from that position by itself.

Here is a good ration for feeding young ducks: Bread soaked in milk, bran of equal quantity mixed to the right consistency with middlings.

Ducks must have green food of some kind, and if they cannot have a run on tender grass give them sprouted oats.

Don't overfeed the ducks with stuff that will swell and clog. Keep them supplied with plenty of water both night and day.

Shadows.

"Could you sing that song about the twilight when the flickering shadows softly come and go?" said the sentimental youth. "Sir!" exclaimed the lady at the piano. "I don't approve either of the current fashions in gowns or of the promiscuous references to them."

HEALTH OF POULTRY FLOCK

House, Roosting and Nesting Places Must Be Kept Clean and Free From All Disease Germs.

There can be no success with poultry unless the fowls are healthy, and the main assurance of health in the fowls is healthy surroundings and conditions. In the first place, the house, the roosting and nesting place, and particularly the setting place, must be kept clean and free from the elements of disease. Many people now have separate places in which to make the nests for the setting hens and move them from the laying nests to the setting nests before putting under them the eggs for hatching. This is a good plan and it is not difficult when worked out with reasonable skill and judgment. In moving a hen it is necessary to confine her at her new nest for a short time, a day or two perhaps, but if she is broody she will soon accept her new nest, and the eggs may safely be given her. Be sure that setting nests are new and clean. The material used in making them should never have been used in a nest before; then a little lime sifted in the material makes it a nest safe from all the poultry pests. The laying nests, too, should be kept fresh and clean, and a little lime occasionally sifted in them is an important precautionary measure.

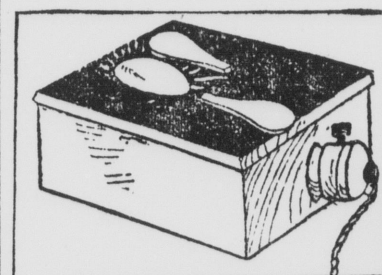

Each time the house is cleaned it should have a good treatment of lime sprinkled over the floor until it shows distinctly, and dashed or sifted into all the wall and corner crevices and on the roosts. This is scarcely equal to whitewashing, but it is the work of only a few minutes, and it is a great help.

The young chicks raised on the farm are expected to have much the same runs year after year. These runs are liable to become germ and disease infested, and then there is complaint of "bad luck with the young chicks." Gapes appears among them and many die without apparent cause. Early every spring such runs should be treated with a liberal dressing of lime. Let it be sown broadcast, or otherwise evenly spread all over the ground until its whiteness can be easily seen. Lime is not costly, and when it is sprinkled it does not take much to accomplish this purpose. It is a practical guaranty against many of the young chick troubles.

shines through two beveled-edged slots in the top. The outside of the box is covered with black felt cloth and the inside is lined with white asbestos. The strong light shining through eggs placed in the slots makes it possible to judge their quality even in daylight.

Feed Relished by Chicks.

Give the chicks plenty of green food, sprouted oats, or tender grass, also some fine beef scraps or some raw meat cut up fine. They relish the latter and it does them much good, answering the same purpose as insects. Keep the little ones busy by feeding the ground grain feeds in the litter, and feed them four or five times daily.

Demand for Feathers.

There is a good market for all kinds of feathers. Pick fowls dry and sort feathers, the coarse from the fine. They can easily be preserved until enough are collected to take to market.

Supplement Nature's Food.

GERMAN ULTIMATUM SENT TO RUSSIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

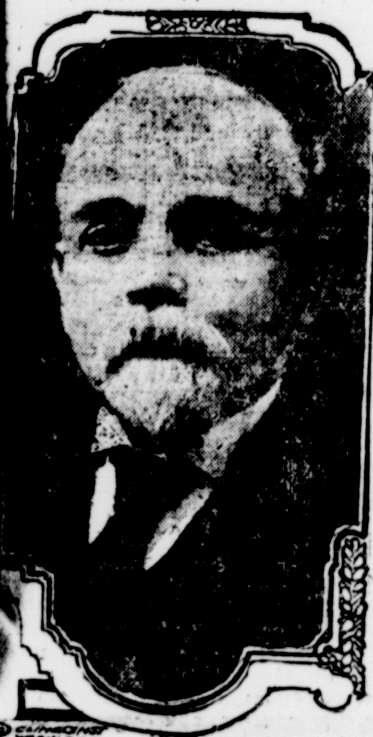

Berlin, July 30.—Germany has sent an ultimatum to Russia giving the Czar 24 hours to explain what Russia means by the mobilization of troops.

The crisis which Germany is facing was considered very grave this evening. Prince Henry, Gen. Von Moltke and several high personages in both army and naval circles were in conference and reports were circulated that the mobilization of the army and navy had been ordered, although these reports were contradicted in official circles.

The populace, however, believes that war is coming. Gold is disappearing fast from circulation, there are many runs on banks, the sudden rise in prices on food-stuffs and the prospects of banks calling in loans have had a panicky effect upon the people.

Enthusiasm is rampant everywhere. The people, while deploring the depressing circumstances, that have already arisen, since the Austrian declaration of war, are in the wildest excitement. So great was the excitement at Breslau that the authorities issued an order forbidding processions.

Officers on leave are returning to barracks on all trains. Russians are leaving Germany by thousands and returning to their home country. All trains from France are bringing in hundreds of German women and children.

The Man of The Merchant

He Proved His Courage and Daring.

By PETER VAUX

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

No sooner did the senior engineer hear the peremptory summons than he hurried from the crowded wardroom. "Poor devil! Did you notice his face, Bellamy?" said the second engineer, addressing the florid paymaster. "He went as pale as death. When the deuce does Torsbell eat and sleep, Naylen? He never seems to be off duty."

The surgeon twitched his spruce eyebrows.

"Oh, Mebbe, our senior engineer—our man of the merchant marine!" said he in his usual stippant, exasperating tone. "He'll go the same as Chislehurst if worries don't cease. No human being, much less Torsbell, can stand for any length of time the state of affairs in this boat's engine room and stokeholds. It's enough to drive any man mad!"

"Chisle is really not well, then? We all know the complaint of Patten of the Farin' Furnace, as the fo'castle terms her."

Naylen shrugged his shoulders. "Our staff engineer went into sick bay to let this R. N. R. fellow shine, did he?" was his tart rejoinder. "Too much strain and unrest have knocked him off his legs. And so Mebbe is the man we must depend on now."

Said the paymaster in his big, rancorous voice: "That is what happens with these understaffed engine rooms and insufficient repairs. Here we are, the latest of the lame ducks in the division and tallin' off the column, with a reserve chap out of an easy, cozy, ten knot merchantman handling our engines, and rickety old machines they are. God alone knows what'll happen with him and his untired nerve when we pick the enemy up again!"

"A jolly good thing for us the enemy are just as much worried with breakdowns," was the consoling remark from the other end of the table. "The Rurik, the Freya, the Jena and—"

"I wouldn't indict the dockyard on the insufficient repairs point, Bellamy," interrupted the second. "My lords were responsible. They wouldn't enlarge the yards, make new ones or lease out repairs, so as to have all the necessary work for mobilization coped with adequately. But it is odd how she was passed out with the starboard cylinder cover not remedied. Of course nobody'll be held responsible, as usual!"

Bellamy nodded, turning from scolding the harassed steward. He replied slowly. "But yet when an R. N. R. fellow can pop up and take seniority over the regular service, as in this boat, you can't expect—"

"Oh, here we are again!" the second broke in with "Jealousies as usual. Torsbell is as fit as any engineer. By George," he cried, listening intently, "the engines are slowing down!"

Torsbell had approached Captain Widdington and the "first," who lingered in the chart house discussing recent instructions. The senior engineer had coughed slightly to intimate his presence. The captain looked up, a frown sweeping his hard face on marking him.

"Sir," cried the engineer, "the port—"

"One moment, sir!" was the short answer. "This isn't a steam bus." And Torsbell, again saluting, had stepped back, his pallid face blood red and his teeth hard clinched and gritting. The wary, diplomatic first just then cheerily nodded aside to him.

He let himself rock to the vessel's jiggling among the cumbrous masses of sea. Since he had joined, off the way-laid liner, his had been hard luck. He felt acutely the general sentiment against him; but notwithstanding all, his mettle was yet strong. It was the snobbish crowd in the wardroom and the unpleasant bearing of his subordinates that caused his discomfort of mind.

Suddenly he had held in his breath and unwittingly stepped toward the bridge ladder. The first drew himself back from the chart, darting a look of surprise at Torsbell. But the captain's steel blue eyes flamed with sudden anger.

"Good heavens, sir! Your engines aren't slowing down?"

Torsbell saluted. "Port air pump, sir."

"This drives a man mad!" cried Widdington, crashing his big fist upon the table. "Nothing but defects, defects! Can ye drive engines at all, you miserable merchantman? What d'ye want to slacken down to? What's wrong this time? You—"

"That second came a tremendous jarring and crunching beneath their feet. The great ship was shaken like a thing of straw. An appalling hammering followed, chaotic and deafening. Gray steam surged through hatchways, ventilators and companions.

The senior engineer had rushed from the bridge. As he raced amidships he snatched the sacking off the backs of some of the "black squad" dumping ashes overboard, grabbed at a quartermaster's oilskins and shoved them all upon him.

"Garret an' Eppurn an' Mr. Jerroll in port alleyway?" was the answer to his shout from the artificers now in safety. It reached his ear as he stepped down into the uproar of smashing, clashing metal.

With heightened anxiety and fear, Widdington stared at the steam still outpouring. The thunderous clanking of ponderous machinery galloping loose beat frightfully into his ear. With much more of it bilge plates would be started.

It was then that a bear eyed, cinder burnt signalman came hurrying along. "Flagship flagin' out 'Chase' signals, sir!" was his report.

III.

When Torsbell again dragged himself on the bridge he was a mere unshapely mass, held together by swaths of lint. Widdington stepped hastily to him and helped him up the last rungs of the ladder. The captain looked into the seamed and scalded face, nearly hidden beneath bandages. Said he heartily: "By heavens, ye've pluck! These men owe their lives to you. Ye've pluck." And with this certificate forthcoming at last for service done he dismissed the case for heroism.

"But about this breakdown—what can you do? Our east wing scouts are in touch with the enemy, and here am I not doing five knots. Never a shot to be fired, and ahead they've got all the work. Can you do nothing with these starboard engines?"

"They are in a pretty bad fix, but I'll do my best to work them for a time at least."

The senior engineer staggered to a deep wallow of the stricken vessel as a tumultuous swell tilted her casemated broadside. He would have fallen headlong if the officers had not sprung forward and caught him under the arms. He moaned. "My knee! My knee! It's smashed."

Half an hour later he was superintending his officers and men, who, stripped to their trousers, were clearing away the wreck. Every order that issued peremptorily from his blanched lips went full and fair to the mark and afforded succinct knowledge and confidence to the grim, sweating workers. There were unbegrudging obedience and execution, for each now understood his man. Hunched shouldered, he was through physical agonies; yet, knowing that he held the lives of 700 men and that great, glorious ship in his hand, he maintained his will indomitable. Not a detail escaped his eye or slipped his brain.

IV.

Night had long since dropped. The immense boat lay lurching from side to side, plunging wildly under the tons of green sea that thudded like battering rams against her bows and forecastle what time the high walled swell broke roaring.

"Make for northwest trade patrol. Regain nearest port. Much regret breakdown," had been the sorely harassed vice admiral's latest message.

Captain Widdington, a barrel swathed in shawls and many waterproofs, was with the first and third lieutenants on the afterbridge. Wearily he turned from straining his eyes over the indistinct summits of yeasty seas and cleared the brine off his face and bushy eyebrows with the flat of his left hand. He was cautiously making his way up the bridge when suddenly he stopped short. A quartermaster shouted, "D'ye hear that, sir?"

A faint boom had rung through the stormy wind, ominous, like to a dying world's last echo.

The first dodged a scattered spout of sea. "If the enemy drive down on us will you fight, sir?"

"Yes, by heavens! As well go down fighting as not. If we can work ship it's the very weather for us. See Torsbell. I must risk the port engines."

And as Widdington carefully made his way on deck "Firin' east sou'east!" was the lookout's hail.

He climbed down the thirty odd feet of slippery ladder into the maze of motionless machinery. As he touched the senior engineer on the elbow he noted his inert and quivering lips.

"Can't say," was the answer. "Mebbe we will. But every man is workin' his best. If it is in my power the starboard mills 'll run."

"If we can't steam God help us!" ejaculated the first.

V.

As the luckless warship flung herself about the iron flooring beneath the without men seasawed hither and thither, throwing them off their feet. She heaved herself in a broad valley of the mountainous sea wastes.

Torsbell yelled: "Let her go! Let her go!"

A breaking bill of wild water was hurling itself on the weather quarter just as the chains rattled through the blocks. Torsbell rushed forward and then, to the boat's violent heeling, toppled helplessly between the hinder column of the intermediate engine and the banging mass of cylinder gear.

"Lower! Lower! Never mind me!" came in an intense shriek. Their racked and knotted arms pulled desperately, and the disconnected workings were lowered clear down to the floor plates.

The maimed and bleeding mass of flesh that had been Torsbell, R. N. R., was slipping into the crank pit, but Jerroll and some others held it fast. And it came that as the warning voice moaned "Give her steam! Give her steam! Mind the links!" the mad pealing of the telegraph made his assistant leap to the starting engine. The two cut off scouts of the enemy were opening a heavy cannonading.

The dull grunting of guns and the quickening thud of his engines the senior engineer did not hear. Cried Naylen, on his knees beside him, "The best man among us, and we never knew it!"

The fighting ship went bravely into action, but the man of the merchant marine would never again give ear.

Piano-Box Poultry House.

A useful poultry house is made by removing the backs and tops of two piano boxes of the same size and placing them back to back, leaving a sufficient space between to allow for a door, the opposite end being boarded up. A roof and floor is easily put in, and window space knocked out on the south side. The sides and roof may be papered on the outside.

MANAGING THE TURKEY

Birds Will Not Do Well If There Is Too Much Management in Raising—Free Range Is One of Most Important Factors.

The turkey is the only one of our domestic fowls that originated in America. While the chicken has been bred up from the wild jungle cocks and hens of Southern Asia, the white men found the turkey here when they came. And the turkey has changed very little in the three or four centuries since the first Caucasian came to America.

Turkeys all have a streak of wildness in their natures. A turkey hen will always do better when she is allowed to steal her nest. If left undisturbed she will bring off much better hatches than if interfered with by well-meaning poultry keepers, says a Kentucky writer in Farm Progress.

These wild birds resent interference, and many times I have known them to desert their nests when molested. I always let them alone until after the brood has been brought off. In their wild state they are able to rear their young very well, as they run in woods and along streams where the underbrush and weeds do not interfere with them. In fields and around farm houses it is best to keep them for a week or ten days after hatching. The young turks are not able to stand being dragged through wet grass and weeds wet with dew.

Anyone who understands turkey nature can make some profit from the breeding of these birds if there is room for them to have considerable range. As a bird for yards and coops the turkey is distinctly out of place. I have never known anyone to raise them successfully in confinement, and doubt if such a thing is possible.

Akin to Wild Turkey.

The bronze turkey is very closely akin to the wild turkeys still found in small flocks in various parts of the country. When Columbus returned to Spain after his first voyage to America he took with him a few of these beautiful birds. Later voyagers took a great many of them to Spain, and from there they were taken to England.

The Old World has been raising these domesticated birds longer than we have, but four centuries of confinement and breeding have failed to breed all the wildness out of their natures.

The bronze turkey, direct descendant of the wild turkeys of tropical and sub-tropical America, is the largest of these birds now grown. The old traits of wildness, caution and a tendency to hide when about to set, are still characteristic of the bird. Some of the bronze turkeys reach a weight of 45 pounds, which seems greater than any birds of the wild varieties. Careful and selective breeding has increased the weight and deepened the colorings and plumage markings.

Dark eyes, coppery bronze and glistening black plumage, offset and heightened by white markings at the feather tips, are some of the most notable characteristics of the bronze turkey. The basic color of the plumage is black, and over this plays a combination of iridescent greens and coppery lights.

HINTS FOR THE DUCK RAISER

Twenty Ducklings in a Flock Is Plenty as They Are Rather Easily Injured by Overcrowding.

Do not overcrowd the ducklings. Twenty in a flock is quite enough. Their joints are very tender and easily slipped out of place and for this reason it is not safe to keep too many in a yard. It is also a bad plan to allow other stock to run with them.

When frightened a fat duckling is apt to fall over on its back and if not turned over it will lie there and die as it cannot get up from that position by itself.

There is a good ration for feeding young ducks: Bread soaked in milk, bran of equal quantity mixed to the right consistency with middlings.

Ducks must have green food of some kind, and if they cannot have a run on tender grass give them sprouted oats.

Don't overfeed the ducks with stuff that will swell and clog. Keep them supplied with plenty of water both night and day.

Shadows.

"Could you sing that song about the twilight when the flickering shadows softly come and go?" said the sentimental youth. "Sir!" exclaimed the lady at the piano. "I don't approve either of the current fashions in gowns or of the promiscuous references to them."

HEALTH OF POULTRY FLOCK

House, Roosting and Nesting Places Must Be Kept Clean and Free From All Disease Germs.

There can be no success with poultry unless the fowls are healthy, and the main assurance of health in the fowls is healthy surroundings and conditions. In the first place, the house, the roosting and nesting place, must be kept clean and free from the elements of disease. Many people now have separate places in which to make the nests for the setting hens and move them from the laying nests to the setting nests before putting under them the eggs for hatching. This is a good plan and it is not difficult when worked out with reasonable skill and judgment. In moving a hen it is necessary to confine her at her new nest for a short time, a day or two perhaps, but if she is broody she will soon accept her new nest, and the eggs may safely be given her. Be sure that setting nests are new and clean. The material used in making them should never have been used in a nest before; then a little lime sifted in the material makes it a nest safe from all the poultry pests. The laying nests, too, should be kept fresh and clean, and a little lime occasionally sifted in them is an important precautionary measure.

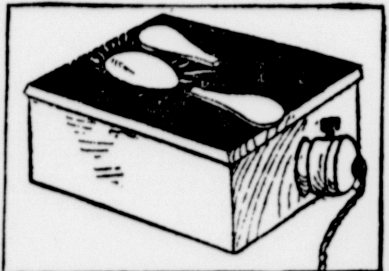

Each time the house is cleaned it should have a good treatment of lime sprinkled over the floor until it shows distinctly, and dashed or sifted into all the wall and corner crevices and on the roosts. This is scarcely equal to whitewashing, but it is the work of only a few minutes, and it is a great help.

The young chicks raised on the farm are expected to have much the same runs year after year. These runs are liable to become germ and disease infested, and then there is complaint of "bad luck with the young chicks." Gapes appears among them and many die without apparent cause. Early every spring such runs should be treated with a liberal dressing of lime. Let it be sown broadcast, or otherwise evenly spread all over the ground until its whiteness can be easily seen. Lime is not costly, and when it is sprinkled it does not take much to accomplish this purpose. It is a practical guaranty against many of the young chick troubles.

Feed Relished by Chicks.

Give the chicks plenty of green food, sprouted oats, or tender grass, also some fine beef scraps or some raw meat cut up fine. They relish the latter and it does them much good, answering the same purpose as insects. Keep the little ones busy by feeding the ground grain feeds in the litter, and feed them four or five times daily.

Demand for Feathers.

There is a good market for all kinds of feathers. Pick fowls dry and sort feathers, the coarse from the fine. They can easily be preserved until enough are collected to take to market.

Nature provides food for the chicks the first 48 hours of their lives. Some poultry keepers supplement this with some fine grit and fresh water.

Tilden J. Smith Pays $5 for Singing on Albany Avenue.

While Tilden J. Smith when sober may be a good singer yet he found out to his sorrow this morning that he had better subdue his vocal efforts when he has too much liquid stimulant aboard. Tilden on Wednesday evening after he had safely stored quite a cargo of joy water decided that he would call on his girl, who he thought lived on Albany avenue, and he started out to make a social call. When he neared Merritt's boarding house at 180 Albany avenue Tilden began to warble a serenade to his lady friend and his vocal efforts aroused the boarders who telephoned to police headquarters and Tilden's serenade was suddenly cut short by the arm of the law and he was locked up in jail. When morning when arraigned he was asked by the recorder if he was guilty of being drunk and disorderly and replied soberly that if he had been arrested he must be guilty. When asked what he was doing on Albany avenue he replied that he went to see his girl. "I thought you were married," said Recorder Grogan.

Tilden replied quickly "No," and then scratching his head he continued, "Oh, yes I am married but I don't live with my wife."

He was fined $5, which he paid from a large roll of bills. He was advised that he had better leave the drunk with the police or he would be drunk again before night, but Tilden rejected the advice and said he was willing to bet $5 that he would be sober when night fell. "I want to get that $5 back," he explained. It is needless to say that the bet was not accepted and Tilden left minus his $5 fine.

Accident on Bridge Road.

One man was killed and two were injured Wednesday morning when a heavy locomotive of the Central New England Railroad jumped the tracks near West Pawling and ran full tilt into a bank of solid rock. The engineer, Romaine Whitson of Beacon, was badly scalded and bruised, and Frank Cowles the flagman, was slightly injured. The dead man boarded at Hopewell Junction. He has a wife and two children in Shohola, Pa. Why the engine, which was running backwards at the time, jumped the track is not known.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, July 30.—And now comes one Anthony D. Padula of Worcester, Mass., who gets himself in awfully bad with the college authorities by remarking that he sees no wrong in a college baseball player playing for money during the summer months.

Padula has followed college affairs for many years. Few of the collegiate doings have escaped him. He is regarded as an authority on college athletic affairs. But now, poor fellow, he is due to be shot at sunrise or boiled in oil because of his remarks.

There is a great weight in what Padula says. And his ideas are right. What's the difference whether a student helps to pay his school expenses by working during the summer at tutoring, carrying the hod, lighting lamps, waiting table at a summer resort, or playing baseball? Padula predicts that the time is not far distant when the college authorities will lift the ban on the playing for pay idea during the summer. As soon as they do, it will mean less deceit and more honesty on the part of the college baseball stars. They don't have to play under the name of Sullivan, Jones, Smith, Brown or others on the fake order as some of them do now.

The college authorities, from time immemorial, have attempted to ban the college stars from playing baseball for pay during the summer, by merely forbidding it and by taking away the players' amateur status when discovered. But the collegiate star, who needs the money, willingly has taken the chance of discovery by playing under an assumed name. Some have been caught in the act—but they are the exception.

Playing baseball for money during the summer season doesn't seem to be any grave offense in the eyes of the fair minded lover of sports. If a student, who is paying his own way through college, can earn $500 or $600 by playing baseball why not permit him to do it? It seems selfish to bar him by any rules. It's a hard enough job for the ambitious youth of parents in only moderate circumstances to earn the necessary money to give him a college education. Instead of hindering him the authorities ought to help. And they could help by lifting the ban on playing ball for money. Then the player, as soon as the school year is over could go out and get a good paying job with some ball team.

As stated, a number of the college players do play professional baseball during the summer, but they have to do it under cover and therefore they cannot get all the salary they are worth. The manager of the professional teams give the college players jobs, but they pay them as little as possible. The manager holds the whip hand. He knows the collegian must play under cover or not at all. He takes advantage of the situation by offering as little money as possible to the player, and assuming the attitude that he is doing the player a favor by giving him a job and not "peeping" about it.

If the ban were lifted it would work out greatly to the advantage of the college star. The baseball manager then could bill the collegian as one of the stars of the team. The attendance, no doubt, would increase visibly and the manager on the strength of this, could afford to give the collegian double the salary that he pays him for working under cover.

Farther than this, the collegian could force the baseball owners to bid for his services. He wouldn't have to snap up the first offer, as he usually does under present conditions. He could force the bidding to a notch when summer baseball would pay him what he really is worth as a player and an attraction.

Padula argues that permitting a collegian to play ball during the summer months would greatly benefit the player and add to his skill. "As matters stand now," he says, "most of the players lay aside the bat and ball after commencement and do not touch them again until the next spring when they begin cage work."

"This is bad. The college players' season is short—much too short. Of course, he begins practice late in the winter in the gymnasium, but the real practice does not start until he gets outdoors, usually in April."

"That give him only about two months of real playing. He seldom gets started until May and by June, when he is traveling at full speed, he must quit."

"The practice of suddenly cutting off a player from participation in the game just when he is really started means that before the next February rolls around he has forgotten about half of what he has learned."

"On the other hand, the collegian who continues to play during the summer improves at a startling rate. He improves not only in skill but gains in experience which is so essential for his success on the diamond."

Joseph Remington, the fireman, was caught between the cab and the rock bank and died within a few minutes. The engineer, Romaine Whitson of Beacon, was badly scalded and bruised, and Frank Cowles the flagman, was slightly injured. The dead man was boarded at Hopewell Junction. He has a wife and two children in Shohola, Pa. Why the engine, which was running backwards at the time, jumped the track is not known.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, July 30.—And now comes one Anthony D. Padula of Worcester, Mass., who gets himself in awfully bad with the college authorities by remarking that he sees no wrong in a college baseball player playing for money during the summer months.

Padula has followed college affairs for many years. Few of the collegiate doings have escaped him. He is regarded as an authority on college athletic affairs. But now, poor fellow, he is due to be shot at sunrise or boiled in oil because of his remarks.

There is a great weight in what Padula says. And his ideas are right. What's the difference whether a student helps to pay his school expenses by working during the summer at tutoring, carrying the load, lighting lamps, waiting table at a summer resort, or playing ball? Padula predicts that the time is not far distant when the college authorities will lift the ban on the playing for pay idea during the summer. As soon as they do, it will mean less deceit and more honesty on the part of the college baseball stars. They don't have to play under the name of Sullivan, Jones, Smith, Brown or others on the fake order as some of them are doing now.

The college authorities, from time immemorial, have attempted to ban the college stars from playing baseball for pay during the summer, by merely forbidding it and by taking away the players' amateur status when discovered. But the collegiate star, who needs the money, willingly has taken the chance of discovery by playing under an assumed name. Some have been caught in the act—but they are the exception.

Playing baseball for money during the summer season doesn't seem to be any grave offense in the eyes of the fair minded lover of sports. If a student, who is paying his own way through college can earn $500 or $600 by playing baseball why not permit him to do so? It seems selfish to bar him by any rules. It's a hard enough job for the ambitious youth of parents in only moderate circumstances to earn the necessary money to give him a college education. Instead of hindering him the authorities ought to help. And they could help by lifting the ban on playing ball for money. Then the player, as soon as the school year is over could go out and get a good paying job with some ball team.

As stated, a number of the college players do play professional baseball during the summer, but they have to do it under cover and therefore they cannot get all the salary they are worth. The manager of the professional teams give the college players jobs, but they pay them as little as possible. The manager holds the whip hand. He knows the collegian must play under cover or not at all. He takes advantage of the situation by offering as little money as possible to the player, and assuming the attitude that he is doing the player a favor by giving him a job and not "peeping" about it.

If the ban were lifted it would work out greatly to the advantage of the college star. The baseball manager then could bill the collegian as one of the stars of the team. It would make a good drawing card for the minor league teams. The attendance, no doubt, would increase visibly and the manager on the strength of this, could afford to give the collegian double the salary that he pays him for working under cover.

Farther than this, the collegian could force the baseball owners to bid for his services. He wouldn't have to snap up the first offer, as he usually does under present conditions. He could force the bidding to a notch when summer baseball would pay him what he really is worth as a player and an attraction.

Padula argues that permitting a collegian to play ball during the summer months would greatly benefit the player and add to his skill. "As matters stand now," he says, "most of the players lay aside the bat and ball after commencement and do not touch them again until the next spring when they begin cage work."

"This is bad. The college players' season is short—much too short. Of course, he begins practice late in the winter in the gymnasium, but the real practice does not start until he gets outdoors, usually in April."

"That gives him only about two months of real playing. He seldom gets started until May and by June, when he is traveling at full speed, he must quit."

"The practice of suddenly cutting off a player from participation in the game just when he is really started means that before the next February rolls around he has forgotten about half of what he has learned."

"On the other hand, the collegian who continues to play during the summer improves at a startling rate. He improves not only in skill but gains in experience which is so essential for his success on the diamond."

STATE OF WAR DECREED BY GERMAN EMPEROR

This is Not a Declaration of War Against Any Nation, but a Preliminary to Calling Out the Whole Military Strength of the Empire.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, July 31.—Emperor William of Germany today decreed a state of war.

The following official announcement was issued:

"In conformity with paragraph 68, of the constitution of the German Empire, Bavaria being excluded, the German Emperor has decreed a state of war. A similar decree for Bavaria will be issued."

The emperor's decree means the immediate mobilization of Germany's army of 5,200,000 men, and their movement to the frontiers of the empire. The decree was issued after Russia had failed to give a satisfactory explanation of her "partial mobilization."

Article 68 of the German constitution under which the decree was issued provides:

"When public safety in the Federal territory is menaced the emperor may decree any part of it to be in a state of war."

The decree also means that a state of martial law prevails throughout the empire.

The railroads of the entire country have been taken over by the military forces. Troops are being sent in force to the Russian and French borders. Germany expects her mobilization to be followed with similar action by both these countries.

Wilhelm forces of all these nations are now footing a general war. The Russian ukase calling out more than 1,000,000 reserves increased the strain of the situation so tense that it could bear nothing more, and when St. Petersburg failed to give a satisfactory explanation the Kaiser and his advisers decided that the Imperial decree would have to be issued.

Before the decree was issued the red cards that tell all those subject to military call that a state of war prevails and calls upon the Kaiser's subject to rally to the colors, had been sent to every town in the Empire.

All preparations for mobilization had been made before the meeting of the Imperial council at Potsdam last night. There the Imperial decree was drawn up and it was signed by the Kaiser today.

The mobilization orders sent to each district of Germany provided that all subject to military service should report. These include all men who belong to the present military establishment, those whose terms of service have been included in the period between 1908 and the present, and such recruits as reported at the last drawing and were excused.

Though denying that the Kaiser's decree meant war with Russia, government officials admitted that the situation was most grave.

When asked if it indicated that a declaration of war against Russia might be expected, one attaché of the foreign office said:

"War is inconceivable. Russia's partial mobilization meant that similar steps should be taken by Germany for defense. Something may be done to avert the worst, but the danger is acute."

Great crowds are parading the streets this afternoon cheering the Kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The entire populace has been aroused to a high pitch of enthusiastic patriotism.

The Socialists still maintain their protests against war. The editor of the Daily Vorwaerts, today sent an appeal to the Kaiser to consent to a mediation conference. The paper says in an editorial:

"The Vorwaerts recognizes the Kaiser's sincere endeavors to work in the interest of peace. In the present struggle neither the honor nor the welfare of the Fatherland is at stake; it is a mad adventure."

Announcement as to when the official order for mobilization would be issued, was withheld when efforts were made to secure information at the war office. It was the general impression, however, that the proclamation would soon follow that of decreeing a state of war.

RUN STARTED ON BANK OF ENGLAND

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 31.—The financial terror wrought by the European crisis was strongly evidenced today when a run was started on the Bank of England by note holders. A long line of persons seeking cash for paper was outside the famous institution this afternoon.

Several joint stock banks were also heavily drawn upon. They paid out partly in gold and partly in notes.

The bank rate was raised to eight per cent this afternoon.

GERMAN LINERS HELD IN PORTS HERE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—Officials of the Hamburg-American line announced today that the liner Vaterland would not sail from New York Saturday and that the liner Amerika would not leave Boston tomorrow. Their sailing time was postponed because of the European crisis.

Boston, July 31.—The Hamburg-American line today cancelled all sailings from Boston. Scheduled passenger sailings in the near future were the Amerika, tomorrow morning and the Cincinnati on August 15. It is supposed the ships will be used to transport reservists to Germany and there will be prepared for transport or cruiser work with light armament.

IMPERATOR HELD IN GERMAN PORT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Hamburg, Ger., July 31.—The great Hamburg-American liner Imperator was withdrawn from transatlantic service today. It is very likely that in case of a general war in Europe the giant liner will be pressed into the German government service.

The Imperator was due to sail from here tomorrow for New York. She had a crew of 1,000 men and 1,000 passengers. It was necessary for these Americans to take passage either on one of the slower Hamburg-American boats or to take a long and roundabout route to reach the American and French lines.

The withdrawal announcement was made, it was stated, because officials felt it safer to keep the liner in the harbor than to risk it to the possibility of capture by some of the great powers.

Thousands of Americans who had planned extensive trips through Europe this summer, have cancelled their itineraries and have engaged passage for the United States. The requests for accommodations have flooded the steamship companies.

Mobilization of troops will also disorganize the entire German railway system.

WHEAT PRICES LOWER AT OPENING

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 31.—The Chicago Board of Trade opened as usual today and contrary to expectations, wheat opened lower. Excitement was intense.

September wheat, which closed yesterday at 94½, opened today at 92 to 91, while December opened from 1 to 2½ under yesterday's close.

May wheat, which closed at 102½ yesterday, opened at par.

Local wheat traders today awaited the opening of the Board of Trade with apprehension. Panicky scenes even surpassing in excitement those of the past two days were expected. This being settling day for July, a mad scramble on the part of the shorts to cover on large quantities of wheat was expected. With the traders already laboring under high tension due to the sensational market caused by the Austro-Serbian war and the prospects of other nations becoming involved, none would predict just what might happen to prices.

When trading began, interest centered chiefly in July wheat and oats. There were less than 800,000 bushels of contract wheat in public warehouses and only about 900,000 bushels of oats. Owing to the immense movement of wheat through this market, this supply was regarded as being unusually light.

The Armour house was said to be long on July wheat while the shorts interests were scattered. It was also said the Armour house was short on oats. The oats situation during the past few days has been complicated by the increase in prices in wheat and corn.

The galleries were jammed when the Board of Trade opened and on LaSalle street, outside the Board's building, several thousand waited to hear "what was doing."

The wheat market grew weaker as the morning progressed and at 10:15 was off almost ten cents from yesterday's high point.

STOCK EXCHANGES CLOSED ALL OVER THE WORLD

New York Exchange the Last Important One to Close and its Example Followed All Over the Country by Smaller Exchanges.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—After bearing the real burden of the world's markets and standing firm for a week while the institutions of Europe were tottering or falling, the New York Stock Exchange was closed today.

This action was taken by the board of governors after a meeting of leading financiers was held at the office of J. P. Morgan. The decision of this meeting that the European situation was too dangerous to permit of trading here, was immediately transmitted to the board of governors, who acted promptly.

Secretary Ely of the exchange gave out the following statement:

"The governing committee decided that the exchange be closed until further notice and that all dealing be suspended until further notice."

The governing committee of the exchange appointed a committee of five to settle any difficulties that may arise out of the closing of the market. It is probable that the question of margins and deliveries will arise. The committee is composed of H. G. S. Noble, president of the exchange; Samuel F. Street, Ernest Groesbeck, Henry K. Pomroy and D. G. Geddes.

W. C. Van Antwerp, acting as spokesman, said that the closing of the exchange was decided upon following Germany's declaration of war.

"The closing of the exchange," he declared, "is a precautionary measure. No real harm will be done and the action of the governors will probably accomplish a lot of good. It was decided that Germany's declaration of war would demoralize the market."

The stock exchanges in nearly all of the other cities in the country followed the lead of the New York Stock Exchange and closed.

The Curb market and the Consolidated Exchange are closed.

Following the announcement of three failures on the cotton exchange this morning and the panicky state of trading which marked the opening, the cotton market was closed soon after the opening.

There was no quotation for bar silver today. The market will remain closed until next Tuesday.

London Exchange Closed.
London, July 31.—The closing of the stock exchange here today has increased the terrible panic that first seized speculators and investors when the war talk began, and the financial situation now is in a state of unparalleled paralysis.

With the Bank of England raising its discount rate from 3 to 4 per cent, and the prospect of another advance being made within 24 hours, with wheat soaring to a record mark, an utter stagnation of the security market, two brokerage firms being forced to the wall over night and others in financial difficulty, the situation today was one that was viewed with horror by the moneyed men of Europe.

The industrial world must soon reflect these conditions in the financial world and the shortage of money and almost ruinous discount rates, presage the failure of many of the oldest established firms in England and throughout Europe.

Wheat is at a premium. It made a sensational rise of $4 a ton over night and even higher prices were offered today with little of the commodity in sight. One firm bought 32,000 tons of American wheat today at an advance of about $4 a ton over the prices that prevailed last week.

Every effort is being made by London bankers to protect the gold bullion reserve, but the outgo still assumes huge proportions and there will be no real check on the outward movement until the old orders are filled. All of this gold has been shipped to other European countries.

Business at Lloyds with the exception of that done along insurance lines is at a standstill. The company is being deluged with requests for insurance against the ravages of war, but Lloyds are loath to take such risks and have boosted the premium rate to an almost prohibitive figure.

The governors of the stock exchange here announced that the July settlement due for securities today has been postponed until August 31, and that the settlement due August 15 also was to be made at the end of the month.

$2,000,000,000 SLUMP IN VALUES

(By Charles W. Storm.)
By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—American securities have slumped approximately two billion dollars in value in one week's time, due to the war scare—the most tremendous loss ever occasioned in the financial history of the world.

A list of only 20 stocks—12 railroads and 8 industrials—show a week's depreciation of about $636,000,000. This is in the common issue alone, with the exception of Great Northern.

Amalgamated Copper slumped off 20½ points in the week, suffering a total depreciation of about $123,000,000 on its authorized issue of $150,000,000 in common stock. The par value of this stock is $25.

Canadian Pacific stock so far has been the worst sufferer in the rail road list, slipping off 27½ points for a depreciation of $72,000,000. Reading slumped 24½ points, but its total depreciation is small in comparison with Canadian Pacific, because its authorized issue is small.

Here is a list of the 20 leading stocks showing their slump in the share value and the total depreciations:

RUNAWAY CAR PURSUED IKE

Thursday evening about six o'clock Dr. William J. O'Leary drove down Broadway in his automobile and stopping near Rogers street he got out to make a professional call. He had just left the machine when it started to run away and dashed down the hill. Isaac Jacobson, messenger for the Rondout Postal Telegraph Company, was on his way up Broadway when he saw the car heading for him. He jumped out in the road as the car ran on the sidewalk, and as he was crossing to the other side of the street the car followed him and he, scared, jumped behind a trolley pole to avoid being hit by the machine, which crashed against the pole, breaking the front axle of the car. When Ike saw the car was out of business he started on up Broadway a much frightened boy even though he had a broad smile on his face. "The blamed car done its best to hit me, but I fooled it," said Ike when asked about it.

Panhandlers Arrested.
Edward Carter and Henry Auxer, two panhandlers, were arrested at West Shore station on Thursday evening by Policemen Welsh for plying their calling. When arraigned this morning before Recorder Grogan they were discharged on their promise to get out of town.

Hit With a Brick.

Thursday evening while a number of small boys were playing on East Union street one of the boys picked up a brick and hurled it at the young son of Sam Salzberg of East Union street. The brick hit the lad on the back of the head knocking him down and cutting a deep gash, which bled freely. The lad was picked up and carried into Ginsberg's drug store on Broadway. Mr. Ginsberg, when he saw how badly the boy was hurt, advised that he be taken to a physician for treatment. Dr. Robinson of Abeel street dressed the wound.

Mrs. Wakefield Sentenced.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New Haven Conn., July 31.—Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, once convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to be hanged for the murder of her husband, slain by James Plew, her alleged paramour, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state prison at Wethersfield today by Judge Joel H. Reed. The jury found her guilty of murder in the second degree, after her second trial ended last night.

Hinduism.

In "Myths of the Hindus and Buddhists" is given this account of the origin of Hinduism: "Hinduism is, in fact, an immense synthesis, deriving its elements from a hundred different directions and incorporating every conceivable motive of religion. The motives of religion are manifold. Earth worship, sun worship, nature worship, sky worship, honor paid to heroes and ancestors, mother worship, father worship, prayers for the dead, the mystic association of certain plants and animals—all these and more are included within Hinduism. And each marks some single age of the past, with its characteristic conjunction or invasion of races formerly alien to one another. They are all welded together now to form a great whole. But still by visits to outlying shrines, by the study of the literature of certain periods and by carefully following up of threads it is possible to determine what were some of the influences that have entered into its making."

Guarded Himself Pretty Well.

Not many people guard their health so carefully as did Sir Tatton Sykes, who in winter wore five or six coats when out riding and shed some of them as he became warmer. Prince Potakine, however, took even stronger precautions against illness. If there was a touch of cold in the air he had fires lighted in his grounds before venturing to stroll in them. His waistcoats were made in two separate pieces, joined at the sides by buttons, so that he could take them off or put additional ones on without removing his coat. If caught in a shower he sheltered himself with an umbrella nearly two feet wide, which came down below his waist and was pierced with little windows. In very hot weather the prince wore boots coated with tin as a protection against mad dogs and carried sponges soaked with vinegar in his shirt front to ward off unpleasant smells.

If another Republican shall be chosen I will make a vigorous campaign for his election."

Modern Education.

A prominent school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are two of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier."

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 31, 1914.

In spite of the new law against the sale of habit-forming drugs it is evident from the criminal court records that considerable quantities of these substances are still being used. This moves Mr. Anderson, the guiding spirit of the Anti-Saloon League, to write to the papers an argument that those who oppose prohibitory liquor laws because they do not prohibit ought to oppose the anti-drug law on the same ground. Such talk can impress only unthinking people. Experience has shown that the use of intoxicating liquors has increased as rapidly as "dry" territory has expanded, so that the prohibition laws are worse than useless. There has been no such experience with anti-drug laws, because they can be enforced since overwhelming public sentiment is back of them. We should be opposed to laws against murder if it had been demonstrated that they multiplied murders, and the same principle applies to all laws. Utility, not sentiment, is the test in all such matters.

The Cape Cod canal, just opened, is, as our readers know, a splendid thing. Judging by past experience, hundreds of lives will be saved as the years go by. Voyages will be shortened by hours and sometimes by days, and millions of dollars will be saved. Now, it is well known that before Mr. Belmont's company carried this object through two other companies tried it and failed. As soon as the Belmont concern begins to pay large dividends, as will probably be the case, we suppose the Government will step in and make it lower its tolls to such a point that it will make 5 per cent or less on its investment, and the canal will be a failure.

Of course, no appropriation will be made to reimburse the poor fellows who undertook the project previously and were impoverished. It is the accepted fashion now-a-days to tell pioneers that if they try something and fail it is their own lookout, while if they succeed they must divide up, giving the idle onlookers the lion's share.

Our Government is about to issue special two and five cent postage stamps in commemoration of the fact that we have had unbroken peace with Great Britain for one hundred years. The period would be much longer but for the fact that common sense was scarce in this country in 1812. Our statesmen of that day provoked a war with Great Britain over an issue that no longer existed and played into the hands of Napoleon, who represented everything that was abominable. When the Corsican fell and there was danger of Wellington coming to take charge of the British troops in the United States we had to make peace on rather inglorious terms. Nothing was said in the treaty regarding the alleged fight of England to impress seamen claiming to be American citizens, which was put forward as the pretext for the war, and the request of the United States that its control of the Mississippi River be recognized was refused. However, we are not celebrating a war, but a century of peace, and it can be done with postage stamps about as well as in any other way.

Going to war was a pretty good speculation a few centuries ago. A leader like Attila, "the Scourge of God," could march from one city to another, living on the country and collecting gold by the thousands of pounds. Whatever he took in was clear gain, since his soldiers took their own wages from the natives as they went along. The statesmen of Europe appear to think that times have not changed. They are blind to the fact that nothing can be gained now-a-days by exacting indemnities or acquiring territory. It has been shown by Norman Angell in his "Great Illusion" that if a German general should capture London and loot the treasure in the Bank of England for distribution among his soldiers he would impoverish himself by ruining the bank in Berlin in which his own fortune was deposited. Japan is poorer than ever since she acquired more territory by war. The hardest times Germany ever saw were in the decade following the payment to her of a tremendous war indemnity by France. The United States is out millions because of its wresting of island territory from Spain. There is no longer any possibility of any nation gaining anything through war—not even character. Otherwise, the Mexicans, who are fighting all the while, should be leaders in wealth and culture. Yet, in spite of common sense, the Hague tribunal remains a joke.

A BOY AND HIS MISSION.

The story is told that at the time of the last great railroad strike in Paris, when strikers and troops were in daily conflict, a four-year-old American boy lived on the top floor of a big apartment house in Paris. One day he went out with his grandmother to visit a friend, and their way led through the busy streets where soldiers were much in evidence. They saw armed men marching through the streets, saw the old nursery of St. Sulpice converted into barracks, watched the troops pouring in, the guards mounted at the gates and the soldiers everywhere. And the boy viewed it all with wide-open eyes.

In time they reached the friend's house, the lad bubbling over with excitement, for he had been much impressed by what he had seen in the streets. As he sat there, listening to all that was said, a young man came in with a story of the way the strike was spreading afar. He told that the strikers were throwing stones and coal, that the soldiers were moving the trains and that trouble was rapidly brewing. The startled blue eyes of the boy grew wider than ever and he sat perfectly still, straining his ears to catch every word.

That night when he went home he excitedly talked to his nurse about the strikers, the soldiers, the streets and all the strange events of the day. Then he closed his blue eyes, only to dream and to live it all over again in sleep.

The next day nothing was said about the strike, the strikers or the soldiers, but after luncheon was over, the little chap was nowhere to be seen. The household was aroused, but the boy could not be found, and after examining every window from which he might have fallen and inquiring and searching in vain, they heard a quick ring at the door bell. Hoping that someone might be coming with news, they hurried to the door, and there stood the missing lad, a sad little picture of woe, tears streaming down his chubby, stained cheeks, and his dimpled chin all a-tremble. All by his lone he had put on his hat and coat, climbed upon a chair to open the door and dragged his big coat down the long hall.

And what were his plans for the day? Why, the little fellow was hurrying to the streets where the conflicts were growing tenser, for he thought it perfectly awful for big men to be throwing stones and powder at one another, and he was going to lend his small strength to prevent it!

And it certainly looks as if a big slice of the world might need the services of the valiant little peace-maker and his faithful hobby horse to make it understand that throwing stones and deadly powder is not a whole-some game for grown-up boys, and that it is never brave and splendid for the strong to fight the weak.

Several years have sped since the day when the little lad started out with his rocking-horse to plead for peace, but if he listens intently to the tales that float over the sea, and watches the war spirit flame high he will have occasion to grow as excited as then, as brave and determined.

For he will hear such disconcerting stories of the mighty cost of fighting that though his old steed may have been reposing in the attic for many a long day he will want to drag it out again, out where the stones are being thrown. But, gracious! He will have to hasten to Austria, to Serbia, and maybe to some of the other Balkan states, on to Russia, to France, to Germany, to Italy, to England, which has troubles enough without any more—and nobody knows where else. But when he hears of all the men to be drawn into the struggle if the struggle grows as predicted, he surely will grow too excited to sleep.

He will listen with bated breath as the huge losses to commerce are predicted, but it will be the estimated cost to human life that will stir him on to start out once again to try to keep the big men from fighting.

And it is enough to arouse the smallest boy of all just to read the prophecy of a surgeon who served with the Bulgarian troops in the last Balkan war. He says that once the forces were marshaled in the fighting field, the number of wounded and killed would jump up to 1,500,000 in one brief month. Possibly a great European war may come, possibly not; and perhaps the prediction of losses is right, perhaps it is wrong; but it comes from a man with grim enough experience, a man who has reason to remember that in the last Balkan war 150,000 men on both sides were killed or wounded in a single month.

And through it all, the most that we hear is about more territory, more power and the like, which may be enough in its way, but not enough when one starts thinking of the mighty price that has been paid in human lives just for the exchange of a paltry bit of land and the advantages that go with it.

One country wants a port, another wants to go on holding it, one has an old score to settle and all have something on the side, so they start at-throwing stones. And when it is all over, the fields are red with blood, and the tide of human progress has been turned back once again.

Somehow one lacks the heart even to read about all the tangled steps and all the miserable pretenses that connect one country with the other, for it does seem that the big human family ought to be able to live and let live, without any more fighting.

FRANCES SHAFFER.

Theron Houghtaling Had It and Recorder Grogan Turned Him Loose.

The beautiful golden glow of the setting sun had nothing on Theron Houghtaling's complexion this morning when he was arraigned before Recorder Grogan on a charge of public intoxication. Theron was picked up on upper Broadway by Policeman Hess and this morning was discharged by the recorder. He said he had been on a spree for the past two weeks and he had not fully recovered. Thursday evening while asleep in a saloon some joker seized with the brilliant idea of improving Theron's natural beauty and securing a bottle of gold paint used for gilding the gold chairs, that may still be seen in some parlors, the joker went to work on Theron's face and when the job was completed Theron was a sight. Artistic circles were drawn on both cheeks and his face was otherwise gaily decorated. Not only was Theron's face a beautiful golden hue but both shoes had been gilded and Theron was easily able to see his complexion in them. That is he would have been able to but he was unable to bend down without falling. Theron's spree lasted two weeks and it will take about that time to rid himself of his complexion by the plentiful use of soap and water.

Family Jar at Steep Rocks.

The family troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Longlais of Steep Rocks were aired in recorder's court this morning when Felix appeared before Recorder Grogan in response to a complaint made against him by his wife, charging him with non-support. After each had told his story it was finally settled that Felix, who works on Terry's brickyard at East Kingston, was to give his wife $3 a week. E. A. McKiernan appeared as counsel for Felix. Husband and wife have not been living together for the past two weeks. When Felix was asked what the trouble was he replied that if he could not be boss any more in his own home he was going to get out.

Committed From Gardiner.

Earle Goes, aged 23 years, a former resident of this city, was brought to the county jail on Wednesday to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of assault in the second degree, having been committed by Justice Denton of the town of Gardiner. It is charged that Goes made a criminal assault on two girls, one 14 and the other 9 years of age. The parents of the girls were not at home when he entered the house and the screams of the girls brought the neighbors running to the house. Goes is a seaman in the navy and is on a furlough.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"Pa, what do they put water in stocks for?" "To soak the investors with, my son."—Boston Transcript.

"Owens says it costs him $6,000 a year to live." "Costs him? Cost his creditors."—Boston Transcript.

"Is this out-door sleeping arrangement you propose, tentative?" "Oh, no. You can take a shack if you don't like the tents."—Baltimore American.

"You prefer swords to pistols when you engage in a duel?" "Yes," replied the Frenchman. "Swords enable you to get in more gestures."—Washington Star.

The Housewife—"Why, see here, aren't you one of the tramps to whom I gave a pie last April?" Weary Waitress—"Yes, ma'am. You gave it to 'ree of us. I'm de survivor."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Traveller (to disconsolate fellow-voyager, at steamship's rail)—"My dear old fellow! What's the matter? The sea's like a duck-pond?" "I know, old boy—but I've taken six different remedies."—Punch.

Auto Demonstrator (who has been trying for three hours to sell the car)—"Now I will throw in the clutch." Uncle Eben—"I'll take the machine, then. I knew if I held off long enough y'd give me something to boot."—Puck.

First Editorial Writer—"I've been making a study of this union labor bill in order to write a leader about it." Second Editorial Writer—"How much do you know?" "Well I know enough to write about it as if I knew something."—Life.

"You don't seem to arouse much political enthusiasm out our way," commented Senator Sorghum. "I'm afraid the partisan spirit is gradually fading," admitted the scout. "What's the reason?" "Well, you see nobody takes money for a vote any more, but every campaigner needs a brass band. So everybody has quit taking an interest in practical politics and has gone to studying music."—Washington Star.

From the Rear.

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who has already occupied the platform for 20 minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much desultory conversation going on in different parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying." Voice from the back of the hall—"Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."—Chicago News.

"The Man From Mars."

Representative "Hammy" Moore of Pennsylvania has become known throughout the country as the father of the waterways. Rivers, harbors, canals and dredging matters are as constantly conspicuous in his conversation as the subject of the water table. Like Paul Dombey, he can say of the sound of the waters "In dreams it is still with me."

His colleague, Representative G. W. Edmunds, met Moore the other day and immediately began joshing him about his hobby.

"Do you know, Moore," he asked, "why it is that you remind me of an inhabitant of the planet Mars?" Mr. Moore avowed his inability to see any relation between himself and the aforesaid astronomical body.

"Well," replied Edmunds, "the reason is, Hammy, because you are so full of canals."—Washington Star.

Warning.

A musical hall artist recently said of marriage. "It is very stupid for a poor young man to marry an extravagant girl. To such a young man I'd say: 'When poverty knocks at the door, loves flies out to dinner with a chap in a motor car.'"—New York Telegraph.

Familiar to Him.

One afternoon this statesman was proceeding along a country road when he saw a cottager eating his supper alone in the road before his dwelling.

"Why, Henry," asked the statesman, "why are you eating out here alone?"

"Well, sir, er—" the man stammered—"the chimney smokes." "That's too bad," said the statesman, his philanthropic sentiments at once being aroused. "I'll have it fixed for you. Let's have a look at it."

And before the cottager could stop him the statesman proceeded to enter the cottage. As soon as he had opened the door a broomstick fell upon his shoulders and a woman's voice shrieked:

"Back here again, are you, you old rascal! Clear out with you or I'll—"

The statesman retired precipitately. The cottager sat in the road shaking his head in sorrow and embarrassment. The statesman bent over him and laid his hand in kindly fashion on his arm.

"Never mind, Henry," said he consolingly, "my chimney smokes sometimes, too."—Harper's Magazine.

COTTEKILL.

Cotterkill, July 30.—There are between 25 and 30 boarders at the Echo Lodge. This large boarding house is being run on a first class up-to-date basis by Charles Bishop, and is considered one of the best boarding houses in this section of the country and the table set by Mrs. Bishop is considered by all to be unexcelled.

A sight which attracted our attention the other day was several teams hitched to hay wagons in one of the fields of the Consolidated Cement Company, being loaded with hay which was being raked up with three hay rakes. There were about 25 or 30 men in the field engaged in getting the hay loaded, etc., before a shower which was fast coming this way. Superintendent Cook and Assistant Superintendent DuBois were also very busily engaged in this work. About 35 minutes of this in a small field of about four acres soon had the hay all raked and ready to go to the barns. The work on the cement works is very dull and the company uses the men to help harvest the crops.

On Saturday evening, August 1, Deputy State Councillor Rufus Kelder of Kingston and staff will make an official visit to Cotterkill Council, No. 168, Jr. O. U. A. M., of this village. This is an ironclad rule with us, therefore look for big bargains. Choose to your heart's content from this beautiful collection. They are mostly staple styles—always good. We have customers that come every year from near-by states to attend these sales—it's become a habit with them. Woman's World

Tacoma, Wash., Has the

JUDGE NELDA JAEGER.

While women have presided in children's courts, a woman on the bench of a general police court is a novelty. Washington, one of the states where women vote, has one. She is Miss Nelda Jaeger, an able member of the Washington bar, who was recently appointed as police judge in Tacoma, Wash. When Miss Jaeger first took her position on the bench the court attendants were temporarily embarrassed, for they did not know exactly how to address her. The dignity and lack of self consciousness on the part of the new official carried off the situation gracefully, and in a short time they were addressing her as "Judge Jaeger" and "your honor" as though women magistrates were quite an ordinary and everyday matter. Miss Jaeger's knowledge of the law and her womanly tact combine to make her a successful and popular official.

THE SEASHORE WARDROBE.

For the Little Folks It Should Be Dainty and Appropriate.

Children at the seaside resorts must be provided with an entirely different kind of a wardrobe from that needed for the country. One that ascends at a bound from the bathing suit or sand frock to the glories of an elaborate creation is required. For the former the little ones wear their rompers or jumper suits, overalls or bathing suits, both in the water and on the sands, the rompers being made of strong wash material and the bathing suits of flannel, serge or mohair.

Evening finds them dressed in the daintiest of frocks, slippers, stockings and ribbons, though even here economy may be practiced without detection. Instead of purchasing a great number of frocks it will be better to get a few and have numerous little accessories, such as dainty aprons, correct footwear, ribbons and bows, all of which help so much toward making a child's outfit attractive.

Shoes, whether high or low, should be substantial for day wear, slippers to be donned in the evening only. Sun-bonnets of white lawn or dimity in delicate shades are dainty and picturesque and more practical than hats.

Gay Waistcoats.

Roman striped and plaided waistcoats are exceedingly smart with tailcoats of dark serge or mohair, but with a suit of lighter colored fabric the flowered silk waistcoat is prettiest. Pussy willow taffeta in moire effect makes a charming waistcoat for a golden brown tulle. Another suit with a short cut-away Eton jacket has a waistcoat of Egyptian crape in post-impressionist design.

Jet Buttons.

Small jet buttons are much used on vests and neckwear. Large crocheted buttons in round and square designs of one or two colors are used on coats of heavy corded cottons and on linen and ratine dresses and suits. There are many fancy stitches introduced in these buttons.

WASHING LACES.

To launder a linen, cluny or any other lace centerpiece successfully, wash carefully, boil, rinse and blue, but do not starch.

Spread a sheet on rug, lay the centerpiece right side down and begin to pin, being sure to stretch while pinning and catch every scallop.

When finished there should not be a wrinkle in it.

While still damp press with an iron not too hot and leave on floor until perfectly dry.

It will come out beautifully, much nicer than if you had sent it to a dry cleaner.

To wash white silk gloves put gloves on hands, use white soap, turn on the faucet and wash the same as if you were washing your hands. If finger tips are very much soiled use soft brush.

Rinse thoroughly; then with a clean towel rub gently toward elbow until most of the moisture is absorbed; then slip off and hang out to dry. They will not need pressing.

THEY SURELY ARE WONDERFUL LITTLE WORKERS
FREEMAN ONE-CENT-A-WORD "WANT" ADLETS

MOTION ARGUED IN $800,000 SUIT

On the hearing Thursday before the Hon. Marcus T. Hun, the referee in the action of James D. Lecky against Winston & Company, to recover $800,000 which Lecky claims because of his discharge by the Winstons, Lecky's counsel having rested their case, Judge Clearwater for the Winstons moved:

First—To strike out all the evidence which had been objected to during the trial upon the grounds stated in the objection to its admission.

Second—To strike out the statement prepared by Lecky's expert accountant, Nasmyth, upon the grounds:

a. That it was predicated upon hearsay.

b. That it was secondary, not primary evidence.

c. That the cross-examination of Nasmyth demonstrated that his conclusions were predicated upon insufficient and inaccurate data.

The referee reserved his decision, and Judge Clearwater then moved to dismiss the complaint upon the ground that the action was prematurely brought, that the cause of action alleged in the complaint had not accrued at the time it was begun.

In arguing this question he said that the gravamen of the action was the breach of a contract alleged partly to be in writing and partly oral, both involving the discharge of Lecky by the defendants from their employ. That the allegation in the complaint was twofold, one to recover liquidated damages, to-wit, a salary of $6,000 a year during the entire term the Winstons were engaged upon the work of constructing the Ashokan dam and its dikes, and secondarily a percentage equivalent to twenty-five per cent of 33-1-3 per cent of the net profits arising from the performance of the entire contract. The judge said that while originally Lecky's claim might have been divisible and an action to recover the salary of $6,000 per year, and waited until Winston & Company had completed their work upon the dam and then brought another action for his alleged share of the profits, he had elected his remedy and joined the two causes of action, and therefore his claim was not divisible, and if it failed as to one it failed as to both; but giving to him the most favorable construction, and admitting for the sake of the argument that the action was divisible and that he could split his claim and over for the $6,000 yearly salary in though he were defeated of his re of profits, his cross-examination demonstrated that he had received from the Winstons $54,000, which was equivalent to a nine year salary at the stipulated figure, and was undisputed that the work on the dam would not cover a period in of seven years. Therefore the stated salary fully had been paid.

In discussing the question of profits, Judge Clearwater said that there was much confusion not only in the professional but in the lay mind as to the profits of a business. That judges, lawyers and laymen in estimating the profits of a venture rarely took into account the depreciation of the plant in which or by which the business is carried on, notwithstanding such depreciation may be and frequently is one of the most important factors in the determination of the profits. Not only did they fail to consider the element of depreciation, but they failed in estimating profits to consider the element of capital paid in for the conduct of the business. He quoted from the court of appeals of this state and the supreme court of the United States the judicial definition of profits which is gain made on any business, investment or venture when all the receipts and all the disbursements are taken into account, the capital paid in and involved in the business considered, and a proper allowance made for depreciation for the plant with which the business is conducted is made, only after all these factors have been given their full weight and proper allowance does profit arise. The failure to make this discrimination, Judge Clearwater said, was not infrequently a cause of the bankruptcy of many apparently prosperous concerns. He urged that the plaintiff's own evidence indisputably showed that it would not be possible to determine the profits which the Winstons would realize from the construction of the Ashokan dam until that work finally was completed. The depreciation of the plant calculated and allowed for, and due allowance made for the amount of capital originally contributed by the partners.

As indicative of the uncertainty of profits and of unexpected and unanticipated charges against profits, the judge said that up until the 30th day of June, 1914, the losses sustained by the Winstons for injuries to their employees amounted to but three-fourths of one per cent of their annual pay roll, whereas under the workmen's compensation act they were chargeable with 13 1/4 per cent of their annual pay roll. The result of which was that when they had two thousand men in their employ the annual charge under the workmen's compensation act would be $141,000 a year. None of this was anticipated when they submitted their bids for the dam, or when the contract was let to them. The judge said there was a vast deal of difference between the value of a business and the profit which might be derived from conducting it as the value involved many factors other than those involved in the computation of profits.

Mr. Haldane, Lecky's counsel, who made the argument in opposition to the motion to dismiss, said that unquestionably difficulty arose in the determination of the amount of Lecky's interest in the ultimate profits of the Winstons' contract; that, however, was no reason why the referee should not estimate the profits or Lecky's share of them, from the best obtainable evidence, and that evidence was the testimony of Lecky and of Nasmyth, who after an examination of the receipts and expenditures of the Winstons, had concluded that their net profits from the construction of the dam would approximate $2,000,000. Assuming this estimate to be correct Lecky's share of the $2,000,000 was 25 per cent of 33-1-3 per cent. Mr. Haldane presented for the consideration of the referee a decision of the court of appeals in the Wheeler and Wilson sewing machine case where the Wheeler and Wilson Company had employed an agent to sell sewing machines in Mexico, fixing a price at which they would deliver the machines to him at different places in Mexico which would enable the agent to sell the machines at a net profit of four dollars for each machine sold. The agent sold 121 machines in one week, giving him a net profit of $484 for that week's work, whereupon the Wheeler and Wilson Company cancelled the contract, and refused to deliver any more machines to him. The contract had a long time to run, and when the agent sued the company to recover the profits he would have made had the machines been delivered as originally agreed, the company defended upon the ground that there was no certainty that he would continue to sell at the rate at which originally he had sold, and that therefore the profits he would derive were too conjectural for determination by a court of justice. The court of appeals held differently, and held that damages could be awarded; that it was indisputably proven that machines could be sold in Mexico at a profit of four dollars a machine, the evidence was there was a large demand for such machines in Mexico, and that it was proper for the jury to determine what damages the agent had sustained by reason of the cancellation of his contract.

Mr. Haldane urged that this was a leading case, and established the commercial rule, and that the same rule applied to Lecky's case. In answering Mr. Haldane's contention Judge Clearwater said that the distinction between what were called commercial cases and what the law designated as new business was clear and well defined. That for instance the Panama canal, the Cape Cod canal and the Ashokan dam, all involving unusual engineering problems difficult of solution, uncertain of determination involving endless risks, great expenditures, created what the law defines as a new and uncertain business, and that as to such classes of business the law applied the rule that any estimate of profits was speculative and conjectural, and therefore not the proper subject of a judicial award.

At the close of the argument counsel handed up their briefs, and Mr. Hun will hand down his decision on the 15th day of September, to which the further hearing of the case was adjourned.

FOOD VALUES OF RARE MERIT AT Planthaber's Saturday

It is no great credit to a man that he is honest; neither is it an unusual attribute for a store. So we do not boast of the honesty of this pure food store, considering it to be the quite natural thing. That honesty is a good policy is proven by the patronage and confidence the people of Kingston have given our Saturday Sales.

Ours is a safe store at which to deal, and the people of this community realize and appreciate that fact.

We are certain of the value of every bit of merchandise in our store. We do not offer it to you at any odd price. The prices we quote for Saturday represent values of our well-known standard quality. Shop here and get the most for your money.

Best Meats, Littlest Cost at Hapeman's Saturday Sale

Eat as good meat as there is because it's less expensive than to eat doubtful kinds. Our market strives to mean just this much to you—a day-by-day protection against inferior grades of meats.

The value of wholesome meats depends upon how good they are. If you buy the tough, stringy kinds, it does not comfort you much to know that you get them "cheap." But when you come here and buy the best, tenderest, juiciest cuts at about the same price, then you are practicing true economy. Visit our sale or telephone Saturday and become convinced of our high qualities and fair prices.

Between Bugles

A Salt Water Romance.

By MATTHEW WHITE, JR.
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The dressing bugle had sounded some time since, but Dorothy still stood looking out over the sea. She was thinking how unfortunate it was that dinner on shipboard always robbed her of a view of the sunset. She was a good sailor and consequently had no excuse for taking her meals on deck.

"Still, if this were the only thing I had to worry over," she reflected, "I might indeed be a happy woman."

And this was why Dorothy Shaw was a mystery to all her friends. She refused to be happy, though rich.

"Try it yourselves," she would reply to their expressions of incredulity. "Have so much money left you that your every movement is followed by reporters. If you happen to order a different paper on Friday from the one you bought on Thursday you are certain that you will read in all of them on Saturday that you have decided to give a million to the campaign fund."

She felt that she could trust no one. By sorry experience she had learned that wealth was a bait few could resist, and "How much does he or she want now?" was her first thought on the advances of every new friend she made.

Finally in desperation she had taken passage in a slow ship under an assumed name, but even so was beset by the constant fear that some one on board would have seen her picture in the papers when her uncle left her the fortune which was her nightmare. That was an additional reason why she liked to linger on deck after most of her fellow passengers had gone down to array themselves for dinner.

"Oh!"

The exclamation was forced from her by a sudden gust of wind that took her tam on its wings and blew it straight across the gap of lower after-deck that intervened on the Alicia between the first and second cabins.

The next instant she smiled and barely refrained from applauding. A man standing well forward on the deck had stretched out his hand and caught the truant bit of red worsted as it went whizzing by him.

A half minute later and the two were standing on the neutral territory of the deck below, for Dorothy had descended in order to meet him halfway in restoring her property.

"I'm very much obliged," said she. "Not at all," said the man. He was tall and straight and had the clear blue eyes that Dorothy preferred above all others.

She was about to turn back when the other exclaimed:

"Look! there's a whale! He's just spotted. He'll come up again in a minute, if you care to watch. See where my finger points!"

Dorothy certainly did care to watch. In all her crossings she had never seen a whale. Now she was rewarded with a fine view of a large specimen.

As it happened, this one kept on in the direction of the steamer for awhile, and after each spout she felt she must wait and see the next one. And then her companion seemed to know a good deal about the creatures, which he imparted in a voice which possessed for Dorothy an indefinable charm.

Voices were a sort of hobby with her. She often declared that this was the one point on which she was not thoroughly patriotic—she could not bring herself to admire the average American accent.

But this stranger's voice puzzled her. He looked and dressed like one of her countrymen, but he spoke with neither the western burr, the southern twang, the Boston affectation nor the New York flatness.

She did not know until some weeks later that he was English born, but had come to the States as a young fellow hoping for better opportunities to make a living than his mother country afforded him. He was returning to England to claim a sum of money left him by an uncle.

The dinner bugle sounded, and the man, as if reminded by its notes that he belonged in a different atmosphere (the second cabin is called to meals by a pebbled bell), lifted his cap and walked away.

For the remainder of the voyage Sherwood Roberts hung over the back rail to gaze into the swirl of waters surging out from the twin screws and curse the fate that had led to his meeting this pretty woman on the present trip instead of on the one he expected to take a few weeks later.

"I might as well be a thousand miles away from her as in second cabin," he muttered between clenched teeth. "Idiot that I was for coming this way. And to think that within ten days I could lay a fortune at her feet. And the conventions won't even permit that I send her a note to say that this is positively my last appearance in poverty. But perhaps I'll meet her in London."

He never did, however, although he haunted Hyde park and the fashionable hotels after his claim to his uncle's property had been established and he had come into the possession of that which enabled him to dress three times a day.

"I wonder now," he would sometimes ask himself, "if I had put my pride in my pocket and borrowed enough on my expectations to come over first instead of second, would things have turned out differently? She looked as if she didn't mind so very much my having detained her to talk about whales. I wonder if—"

But what was the use of wondering anything about a woman he would probably never see again?

So this Englishman who had lived so long in the States that he could not keep away from them re-embarked for his adopted country in a first cabin deck room and tried to be happy in spite of a handicap that he couldn't forget.

During the first night out it came on to blow great gusts. Roberts lay in his berth late, debating whether to get up or not, when suddenly something shot through his open port and hit him squarely in the face.

It was soft and red, with gold threads running through it, and—

"Great Scott!" ejaculated Roberts, starting up in his berth. "Her tam!"

Surely there could not be two of them—at least, he hoped there couldn't. But how had it come into his cabin?

It could not be possible that she knew he was there and had taken this means of apprising him of her presence? Why, she had scarcely spoken half a dozen words to him in her life.

But the cap was hers unmistakably. He fondled it foolishly for a minute or two and then got up and proceeded to dress with all speed, or at least with as much speed as was consistent with the rolling of the vessel.

All day he haunted the ladies' room and the decks, almost deserted on account of the storm, and had begun to read the cards affixed beside each stateroom door when he suddenly remembered the foolishness of this plan to find a woman whose name he did not know.

"This is simply maddening," he told himself after a day of fine weather and still no sight of the tam's owner. "At this rate she will escape me again."

Then he bethought him of a brilliant expedient.

He took a pen and wrote the following notice:

Found.—A lady's red tam, shot with gold. Owner may have same by applying at cabin 23 between bugles any evening.

This he affixed to the bulletin board in the companionway and that night dressed a half hour before the first bugle sounded so as to be in readiness to receive company during the period named.

But nobody appeared that evening nor the next, and now there were only two days left on the voyage.

He had passed a half hour of impatient waiting in the stuffy stateroom on the third day of the notice, and, quite discouraged, threw open his door to go to dinner, when he stepped squarely into the person who had emerged from her room just opposite in the narrow entryway.

"I beg your pardon," said Roberts, and then he fairly gasped as he realized that the other person was the lady of the tam.

"I have something of yours," he blurted out—"that red tam you lost once before."

The girl's cheeks suddenly took on the hue of the cap that hung over Roberts' berth.

"Oh," she said, "was it your port I hung it into? I didn't know. It started to blow away again that first morning, and I thought I was tossing it into my own cabin."

"And you've been just across that five foot space," Roberts rejoined, "while I've been ransacking the ship for you—to restore the tam," he hastened to add. "Didn't you see the notice on the bulletin board?"

"No. This is the first I've been out since the storm. It left me with a nasty reminder of the shaking we all received. I'm so glad to be on deck again! Did you have a pleasant trip on the other side?"

"Jolly fine," answered Roberts.

But he wasn't thinking of the other side at all when he said it, but of the woman he had lost and found again.

Unconsciously they had walked to that part of the deck where Dorothy had been standing when the tam blew off on the voyage over.

"I suppose I must pin the cap in tightly this time," she remarked. "You won't be there to catch it if it flies off again." And she glanced over at the second cabin.

He looked up at the one she was wearing.

"That's a very pretty tam," he observed irrelevantly. "I trust it is sketched in tightly."

Whether she read his inner meaning, she gave no token then, but suggested that it was high time they both went down to dinner. The next night was the dance, and after the final two-step she reminded him that in the morning there would be the bustle of landing.

"And I haven't received you of that tam yet," she added.

"I shall miss it very much," he replied. "And you won't need it now the voyage is over."

"Yes," she said softly, her eyes fixed on Nantucket light, toward which they were swiftly cutting their way. "I suppose it has served its purpose, but I don't want to lose it again."

Roberts knew she wasn't thinking of all the words implied, but he was quick enough to seize at the opening, and—well, before they faced the customs officers on the pier he knew where to take the tam.

But he always forgets to carry it with him when he calls, and when Dorothy one evening said "Yes" to a certain question he asked her she added, "This is a desperate step to take to regain possession of a little old red tam-o'-shanter."

She had made a mental note.

Inspector In Latin—Miss B., of what was Ceres the goddess?

Inspector—Oh, no! Of agriculture.

Striving to Make Lay's Market Absolutely Perfect

We are constantly striving to make our market a more attractive place at which to shop and to carry at all times the finest quality meats it is possible to obtain. Amidst our efforts to carry out those ideals, we find that we are human, and that sometimes we fall short. Won't you help us by telling us if anything goes wrong? If meats are not exactly what you expected them to be, if orders are not delivered promptly and in good condition; if salespeople are not polite and efficient; whenever, for any cause, you feel dissatisfied with this market, WON'T YOU PLEASE TELL US? We want to make this a more satisfying market to our friends. And if our Saturday price quotations do not appear to be as low as you would like to see them, remember it is not our fault. The wholesalers are to blame, and they are entitled to the brick if you feel like hurling one.

THE MAN OF A THOUSAND

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

They called him "Judge" Dale because in the far west you never "mistake" a man when you can call him "colonel" or "judge." As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do it in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman, even when he cursed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinners.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly startled when he received word from Denver that his handsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. He went through the daily routine just the same for two or three days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

"Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge."

"Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and the next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anything or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh cigar, he took a train for the east. Arriving in New York city, he paid a detective to locate the couple.

A steamer was sailing for the Mediterranean at the end of the fourth day, and when she departed the judge was one of her passengers. There were more than a hundred others, and as the weather was also stormy for the first two or three days out no one commented on the fact that the passenger who was registered as Major Davis stuck close to his cabin and had his meals brought to him by a steward. Judge Dale had changed his name, but he had no idea of changing his identity. There were laughter and conversation and a clatter of dishes as all the passengers finally gathered for dinner for the first time since leaving Sandy Hook. To the right of the captain sat one of the handsomest ladies and one of the finest looking gentlemen on the list; but, taken altogether, it was a grand array of wealth and culture. Dinner was fairly under way and the lady on the captain's right was beaming when she happened to cast her eyes down the table, and her face went as white as death in a second. Half a dozen people caught her words as she whispered to her supposed husband:

"John, there is the judge!"

The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as "Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting.

"A—A sudden illness—heart trouble!" she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom.

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery about. The major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along as I shall mine?"

"The party is—!" began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one—just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Ah, of course! We may find game, you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No."

"She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cove, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird.

When the accident became known and it was found that Mrs. Bemis was to go on with the ship instead of ashore to see her husband to his last resting place, there was an outcry over her want of feeling, but it did not reach her ears. She was in the stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again.

When the major had finished his work at the island he took a steamer for New York and home, and upon entering his office at the usual hour and in the usual way he said to his chief clerk:

"Thomas, I am back and feeling better. Bring me the balance sheets for the past four weeks."

Was Looking for M. Ten.

"I say, my friend," called the motorist to the farmer, as he drew up alongside of the field, "I'm looking for a decent road to take me into Squidville." "I'm durned glad to hear it," replied the farmer. "If ye happen to find it, stranger, send me a telegram, will ye?"

PULLING TEETH WITHOUT PAIN

This week a lady came into our office and asked to have five teeth pulled. The nurse took her to a chair. She insisted on gas.

The operator told her that there was no pain in extracting teeth with our new "Local Anesthetic." At first she was insistent on gas, but decided to try one tooth with the "Local."

When the first tooth was pulled she laughed and said: "Go ahead, doctor, and pull the other four."

This new method is far in advance of the dangerous and sickening process of extracting teeth with gas. It is painless and perfectly safe.

Open evenings to 9. Sundays 9 to 1.

Are You Eating Squabs Regularly?

You ought to. They are delicious. Squabs are young pigeons only four weeks old. Perhaps you have bought in the markets old pigeons, often offered as squabs. They are comparatively tough and stringy. The genuine squabs, such as we sell, are right out of the nest, fat, plump, juicy, weighing from fourteen ounces to a pound apiece. They are fully feathered. Same as old birds. Squabs are highly esteemed as an article of food because the juice of the squab (which is pure liquid protoplasm) is the most nourishing and vitalizing fluid known. In fact there is no bird or flesh food that can equal the squab for condensed nourishment. We can supply squabs at any time on receipt of your order. Prices 75 cents per pair, by parcel post 15 cents extra.

CARRIES FINANCIAL MARKETS OF WORLD ON ITS SHOULDERS.

The New York Stock Exchange.

New York, July 31.—With houses and stock exchanges throughout the world closed down as a result of the Austro-Serbian war, the New York stock exchange, the only exchange in the world that is open and doing business, stands as a Rock of Gibraltar against panic and disaster. Financiers, investors, security holders and speculators of Vienna, Paris, Berlin and the smaller European centers have turned to New York as the one open and free market for their transactions. H. G. F. Noble, president of the New York Stock Exchange, has said, "The fact that New York's stock exchange alone had a free and unrestricted market today is a tribute to the sound condition of American finance."

Adversity's Only Sure Bet.

Don't place too much dependence in human nature—not because men in general are untrustworthy, which I do not mean to imply, but because they are human. Promises are often born of momentary enthusiasm and made with the best intentions of ultimate fulfillment. But things happen, conditions change, ardor cools; the sentiment of liberality is superseded by one of selfish interest, and pledges made in the heat of faith are forgotten.

Everything human is frail and mutable. The nature of a man may change with each new environment, but the coin of the realm has a fixed and dependable value. You may fail to cash in on promises, but you can always collect 100 cents on a dollar bill.

That's the reason I say to you that it's all right to have faith in men, but put your implicit trust in cash. It's the only sure bet in the moment of adversity.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Origin of the Argentine Flag.

Mr. Fraser, in telling of the origin of the Argentine flag, says: "The emphatic patriotism of the American is told alongside the hot blooded nationality of Argentina. It is daily inculcated in the schools; the blue and white striped flag is honored on every occasion. When the Argentines were in revolution against Spain in 1810 and needed a banner to flaunt against the red and orange of the enemy they got pieces of blue and white cloth intended for garments from an English warship lying at Montevideo and made a flag of it. So the Argentine flag, like much of Argentine prosperity, is due to Great Britain." Mr. Fraser holds that, in proportion to the population, there are as many millionaires in Argentina as in the United States.—Westminster Gazette.

Housemaid Courtships.

A gayly gownned and garrulous housemaid sat down by an acquaintance on a trolley and at once said: "Hello, Sadie! Where you livin' now?" "Nowhere," was the reply. "How's that?" "I'm married." "You ain't!" "Sure thing. Look at that!" She held up her ungloved left hand in triumph, for there on the third finger was a shining new wedding ring. Starting at it in wonder for a moment, the other girl asked, "Well, who got stung?"—Chicago Herald.

SYNOPSIS OF REPORT BY COMPTROLLER'S CLERKS

Industrial Home and Tuberculosis Hospital Payments Were "Illegal" and Almost Everybody Seems to Have Used the Wrong Kind of Red Tape.

The report of H. T. O'Brien and Mark Graves, the bookkeepers employed by the state comptroller's office at Albany, to go over the books of the different counties, which was filed with the county treasurer on Thursday, is a document covering 358 typewritten pages.

The bookkeepers insist in their written report, as they did when they were in Kingston during the past winter and spring, that all bills paid by the board of supervisors for which there is no particular directions in the law, are "illegal," and they have classed the bills of which they disapprove into "irregular audits," "illegal payments" and "illegal audits."

In examining the county treasurer's accounts since January 1, they found an error of five cents, and they call attention to it in a footnote which says:

"Note. This error was located by examiner and corrected on treasurer's books."

It should be explained that the bookkeepers call themselves "examiners."

Should Work Without Compensation.

The report begins by stating that an examination of Ulster county was made in 1909 and it appears that little or no attention was paid to the recommendations and findings in the report of that examination. "Some of the illegal practices therein referred to were discontinued but others are still in force and on the whole there appears to have been a disposition to continue existing practices whether the same be legal or illegal. This is especially true of the board of supervisors who, although the previous report pointed out the illegality of items in the bills of its members, have continued annually to vote themselves large sums of money as compensation for services for which no compensation is provided by law. The former county treasurer has collected and retained fees to which he was not entitled and the same is true of the former county clerk. Many errors are shown below in the levy of taxes and tables are given which show losses to several of the towns because of errors in the apportionment of the county taxes. The bills of a former sheriff are shown to contain charges which appear to have been made in violation of the penal statutes and the attention of the district attorney is directed to the same."

Salaries Paid Monthly—Why Pay Them at All?

The report states that the county officials and their salaries, and that the law provides the salaries of County Judge Jenkins and Surrogate Gitt are payable quarterly, but "Notwithstanding this explicit provision of the statute the salaries of the officials mentioned have been paid in equal monthly installments." Sheriff Doyle's salary is also payable quarterly, but "Contrary to the statute this salary has been paid monthly."

What "It Is Believed" About Bonds.

The bonds of the county officers meet the law's requirements except those of the late Sheriff Archibald McLaughlin and of Sheriff Doyle, which have two instead of three sureties. With reference to bonds of town collectors, the report states that "Although it is believed these bonds are not strictly in the form prescribed by the statute and that the indemnity should run to the town instead of a supervisor, nevertheless the principal object has been attained in that ample security has been furnished by the collectors. In the future, however, the form should be changed and collectors required to execute an undertaking instead of a bond."

The bonds of the various banks which are depositories, are set forth fully, but the bonds are filed with the county treasurer instead of the county clerk. The bonds contain the provision that the banks "shall obey all lawful and reasonable orders." The report says the word "reasonable" is superfluous, it is certainly unnecessary and ought to be eliminated in the future.

Assessment and Taxation.

The report next takes up the subject of assessment and taxation. The form of assessment roll in the form prescribed by law, but the descriptions of property made by the assessors of the towns are reported to be inaccurate and insufficient for the purposes for which they are required. (This criticism of the tax rolls has been made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners when they have visited Ulster county every other year, for many years, and they have stated that they found the assessment rolls throughout the state in the same condition—that they did not strictly comply with the law.) The criticism and directions of the State Tax Commissioners are quoted in the report, and the inaccuracies in describing property are pointed out in detail.

Criticism of Equalization.

In 1912 and 1913 the board of supervisors equalized valuation in the manner prescribed by the tax law. This method was not employed in 1911, but "was probably due to lack of knowledge on the part of the board of supervisors, the present method not having been required prior to October 1, 1911. Chapter 801 of the laws of 1911 became effective on that day, and made a radical change in the method of equalizing valuations."

The principal criticism of the comptroller's bookkeepers in regard to equalization is that the assessed value of the stock of banks subject to tax must be included in the aggregate amount of taxable property of the county and of the tax districts, which practice is not followed in Ulster county. (The board of supervisors has determined that the bank stock, which is required by another law to pay a tax of one per cent on its capital stock and undivided surplus, is not to be again taxed by having the stock included in the personal property tax which goes to make up the total assessed valuation on which the equalization is based and the tax collected. The comptroller's bookkeepers hold otherwise, and cite a decision in a case arising in the western part of the state to support their contention.) The bookkeepers accordingly "calculated" the apportionments for 1909 to 1913 inclusive, to show what the tax districts gained or lost by reason of "erroneous apportionments, suggesting that the board in making up the next tax levy, adjust and apportion such gains and losses, and examine into the apportionment of years prior to 1909 "to the end that the entire sum improperly charged to certain towns be credited to them, and that the city of Kingston and the few towns which have profited by these errors be charged with the amounts they have profited by reason thereof."

According to the comptroller's bookkeepers, the "calculated" gains and losses arising from the method of equalization is as follows:

Gains.

Town Auditors Don't Make Duplicate Lists.

The failure of town boards of auditors to make duplicate lists of bills audited, certified, and signed by a majority of its members, is criticized, and the bookkeepers say "It is believed that the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors to levy taxes and to pay town accounts" can be exercised only on presentation of evidence. "In the form prescribed by law" of the audit of such accounts. The board should see that the law is "strictly" complied with by the town boards.

"Illegal" to Raise Money by Resolution.

The resolutions introduced annually by the supervisors, and adopted by the board, to add items to the town abstracts which were omitted when the audits were made by the town boards, or for charges arising after the town auditors have met, is declared by the bookkeepers to be "illegal."

The form of tax warrant delivered to the town collectors is disapproved, because the bookkeepers say it "is liable to mislead a collector as to his powers and duties, and they recommend that the form be changed." The practice to attach separate warrants for the collection of fire taxes, water district taxes and lighting district taxes meets with evident disapproval because "Nothing is found in law which seems to require that this be done." The fact that the tax warrants also direct that the collectors pay over the moneys raised for maintenance and repair of state highways meets also with disapproval, and the supervisors should direct the money to be paid directly to the county treasurer. It is also recommended that hereafter the abstract of the tax rolls to be furnished to the county treasurer by the clerk of the board of supervisors shall state fully the amount of each kind or class of taxes levied or reassessed, and the names of the persons to whom such taxes are payable.

County Treasurer Should Change Bookkeeping.

The bookkeepers do not approve the way in which the county treasurer keeps his general ledger account with each town. The treasurer they say, should charge to each collector (not to each town), in the general ledger the full amount which each is to collect, as shown by the abstract furnished to him by the supervisors' clerk; otherwise, "the measure of control contemplated and prescribed by law is lost."

The procedure in regard to the county treasurer's methods of keeping account of the returned tax account is pronounced "entirely irregular" in that it is in compliance with the law nor with the system of accounting prescribed by the comptroller.

How the County Lost $2,272.04.

The report continues: "The county has suffered a loss of $2,272.04 during the period examined by reason of the fact that the county treasurer charged respective two per centum of the taxes assessed against residents and non-residents, and later credited such towns with the taxes allowed by the state comptroller or paid in cash plus a penalty of five per centum."

"Briefly, to correct these errors the county treasurer should, upon settlement with respective collectors, credit them with the amount of taxes returned. He should not charge the returned taxes to towns. Towns do not owe these taxes. They are assets of the county, and the statute provides means by which the county treasurer is to collect them for the county.

"A part, or even all may, under sections 106 and 108 of the tax law, eventually become charges against the towns, but only upon the conditions and after the events herein specified, and not until they are eligible for levy upon the whole town as provided by law."

The bookkeepers then tell the county treasurer, in detail, how the entries must be made to follow out their recommendations.

County Loses $1,680.70 More.

The bookkeepers, by showing that the bookkeeping is wrong, also prove to their own satisfaction that the county likewise in five years lost $1,680.70 on returned school tax accounts. "This loss," they say, "was probably due to a variety of causes: First, the supervisors may not have reassessed each item furnished to them; second, through lack of control over collectors, they may have collected, and, in some instances, it is known that they did collect sums which were not paid in to the county treasury; and, third, rejected school taxes were not charged against towns as they should have been under sections 433 and 435 of the education law."

The bookkeepers do not show there was any loss to anyone through the returns of unpaid taxes, but they criticize the manner in which the returns are made by town collectors which they say in many instances have been in poor and unintelligible form, and they recommend "that the literal requirements of the statute be complied with."

What Summer Residents May Do.

Criticism is also made because the county treasurer has transmitted to the state comptroller only returned taxes upon property described in the return or for which descriptions were furnished by the supervisors. The report says: "In some instances, as for instance the town of Shandaken, there has been an understanding that the supervisor would not furnish descriptions, but on the other hand, that he would act as collector during the summer and collect of non-resident owners—mostly summer people—their unpaid taxes. The reason assigned for this practice was that the collector could not get in touch with these people during the collection period, the winter, and that it was a matter of convenience to permit non-residents to pay the supervisor in the summer. This is a plausible argument and, but for the fact that it is contrary to law, might well be continued."

Then the bookkeepers point out that if summer residents want to get their tax bills in winter, they can pay a fee of one dollar and have their name registered in the town clerk's office, when tax bills will be sent to them.

Fratsher Didn't Use Red Tape.

Under the heading of "Compensation of County Clerk," the bookkeepers quote sections of the mortgage tax law, now a part of the tax law, and show that from January 1, 1907, to December 31, 1912, County Clerk John D. Fratsher deducted from the receipts of mortgage taxes for reimbursement for clerk hire $2,212.75, and quote an opinion of the attorney general in a Tompkins county case that sums allowed by the state board of tax commissioners in a somewhat similar case, should be paid over to the county treasurer, and they attach a copy of the attorney general's opinion to the report. The bookkeepers say: "The work required under the mortgage tax law was done by one of the clerks of the office who, at the time was in receipt of a salary from the county. It does not appear whether they referred to Ulster or Tompkins county. County Clerk William C. DeWitt, they say, after receiving a copy of the attorney general's opinion, has been paying the amount allowed ($29.17 per month) to the county treasurer."

Lawyer's Advice Was Wrong—Of Course.

Taking up next the "Compensation of County Treasurer," the bookkeepers state that ex-Judge John G. Van Ert, in November, 1909, rendered an opinion to Albert H. Cook, then county treasurer, in regard to certain fees, and that Mr. Cook, relying on his attorney's opinion, retained fees on bank taxes, court and trust funds and state tax, from 1909 to 1913, amounting to $904.79 for fees on court and trust funds, and $1,282.58 for fees on bank taxes. In 1913 the county treasurer remitted to the state comptroller the full amount due the county on account of state taxes, without deducting his fees, and subsequently the state treasurer returned the fees amounting to $99.13, which was turned over to Mr. Cook. No entry of this transaction was made on the treasurer's books, and the amount reported to have been paid to Mr. Cook is the amount given to the bookkeepers by the clerk in the treasurer's office.

Since the decision of the supreme court in a recent Montgomery county case, say the bookkeepers, "some doubt exists as to the law with reference to the right of the county treasurer in receipt of a salary to retain the fees on bank taxes. In the Montgomery county case, the court held the treasurer to be entitled to retain as his own the fees on bank taxes because the duties required of him under the bank law were imposed after his compensation had been fixed."

Notwithstanding the opinion of Judge Van Ert to Mr. Cook, which is attached to the report, the bookkeepers say that the same doubt does not exist as to the treasurer's right to fees on state taxes and court and trust funds.

The bookkeepers argue with Judge Van Ert for more than a page and conclude that "it is believed" that an Erie county case and a Steuben county case "clearly indicates that the Ulster county treasurer was not entitled to retain as his own fees on state taxes and court and trust funds."

Tell the Treasurer His Duties.

The next ten pages of the report are taken up by the bookkeepers in telling the county treasurer his duties, and from the quotations and citations these ten pages more nearly resemble a lawyer's brief than anything else.

The county law, which they quote, authorizes county treasurers "to expend county moneys only (1) for claims ordered paid by the board of supervisors; (2) or other lawful authority; (3) or for salaries of county officers; (4) or pursuant to the lawful direction of some court." County treasurers, they say, have no difficulty in determining the payment to which a properly classified under sub-division 1, and they classify a list of "other lawful authority."

"Courts Are Wrong," Say the Bookkeepers.

"Payments made pursuant to the lawful direction of some court usually embrace payments of court and trust funds and certain court expenses," says the report. "It does not always follow that every order issued by a court is necessarily the lawful direction of the court, and it will be found below that some orders have been issued by the court and paid by the treasurer for which no statutory authority exists."

The bookkeepers state that they have arranged the payments made by the treasurer in groups in the order in which they appear in the treasurer's report to the board of supervisors, adopting this arrangement and numbering the groups "for the purpose of comment."

What Bookkeepers Mean by "Irregular" and "Illegal."

For six pages the bookkeepers discuss, with quotations and citations, the subjects of "The Power of Audit," "Verification of Accounts," "Determination of Legality of Claim," "Services of Public Officers," "Officers Expenses" and "Classification."

"In the comments which follow," they say, "the various payments and audits are described as:

1. Illegal payments.
2. Illegal audits.
3. Irregular audits.

"Illegal payments," when used herein, embraces payments made by the county treasurer or the superintendent of the poor without lawful authority, but for purposes properly chargeable against the county if the proper procedure is followed. The term "illegal audits" is used to designate that class of expenditures not properly chargeable against the county under any circumstances. It applies for the most part, to the audits of the county of supervisors, but in some few instances includes audits of the superintendent of the poor, orders of a judge and certificates of the clerk of the court. Those classed as "irregular audits" were found to have been audited without authority or by the wrong officer or board, but are proper county charges when the statutes are complied with."

There are 69 groups of accounts of expenditures by the county treasurer, which total $626,409.35.

"Illegal Payments" and "Illegal Audits."

Beginning with the court and jury fund, the bookkeepers say there were "illegal payments" of $1,213.09 and "illegal audits" of $908. The first criticism of the bookkeepers is to the method of paying court officers, jurors and witnesses. They say the treasurer, who issues warrants on the certificate of the county clerk, should keep some other record showing details, etc., besides the entry on the stub of his check book. Return of cancelled checks from the bank is made every month or six weeks, and between times the treasurer has "no complete and contemporaneous record of the transactions in this fund," and the balance can be determined only by reference to the books of the bank. The bookkeepers say he should not at any time be dependent upon the assistance or co-operation of the bank. These checks are countersigned by a rubber-stamp signature of the treasurer. "Apparently the rubber stamp remains in the treasurer's possession, but numbers of the certificates are stamped and delivered to the county clerk in advance of his requirements. Thus, it will be seen, that the county treasurer is delegating to the county clerk the expenditure of county funds and for the sake of saving some labor in the treasurer's office, has removed one of the safeguards which the legislature has seen fit to provide. Perhaps there is no danger in this practice while the county clerk is honest and trustworthy, but it is the beginning of an illegal practice which, if continued, might some day result in the loss of the county's funds."

The "illegal audits" amounting to $908, say the bookkeepers, are the amounts paid to Archibald McLaughlin, Jr., undersheriff, $282; Seth Jocelyn, $306; Luther Hoffman, $28; Harry McLaughlin, $254. These have been audited illegally, says the report for the reason that the persons named were being paid by the county for time devoted to attendance on the court.

An item of $200 for quarterly payments to an attendant at the chambers of the supreme court justice was paid on certificates issued by the county clerk and is declared an "illegal payment" solely upon the ground that "the clerk was without authority to direct payment therefor."

The report adds: "In justice to the clerk it should be noted that this practice is one of long standing and appears to have originated in a desire to obtain by a convenient, if not strictly legal method, the assistance allowed to the court by the provisions of section 42 of the county law."

"Meals and Lodging for Jurors" Illegal.

Entertainment for jurors, $69.60.

Medical attendance for jurors, $7.00.

Bookkeepers Try to Roast Judge Seeger.

"The bills for the entertainment of jurors and for medical attendance," say the bookkeepers, "were paid by the treasurer upon the direction of the county judge of Orange county presiding at the trial of a criminal case in Ulster county. 'Entertainment for jurors' consisted of payment by the sheriff for tickets to moving picture shows and to a baseball game for the use of members of a jury which remained in charge of officers during the trial of a criminal case. 'Entertainment' and 'medical attendance' may have been considered by the judge to be proper expenses of a jury kept together during the progress of a trial and which by section 42 of the county law are declared to be county charges." Nevertheless, say the bookkeepers, such payments were made when there was no authority in law until after audit by the board of supervisors.

Paid on Original Order Instead of Certified Copy.

The payment for meals and lodging for jurors, also paid on the order of Judge Seeger and the certificates of the county clerk, are illegal, says the report because they were not audited by the board of supervisors, one bill having been paid by Judge Seeger's order, which was dated February 20, 1913, (during the Frank M. Boyce, Jr., trial), "at a time when the judge was without authority to make such an order." Another bill was paid "upon what appears to be the original order made by the county judge and not upon a certified copy as prescribed by the statute."

Properly Audited But Yet "Illegal."

"Irregular audits" amounting to $270.55 and "illegal payments" of $179.94 are next given attention. The first lot of bills ($270.55) were paid to the State Charities Aid Association after audited by the board of supervisors. These bills were properly itemized but "were not verified in the form prescribed by statute."

Even the Industrial Home Bills are "Illegal."

The second lot of bills ($179.94) was presented by the Industrial Home. The warrants were signed by the chairman and clerk of the board of supervisors but "they bore on the face thereof evidence to the effect that they were not certificates of audit duly issued by the board and hence ought not to have been paid by the treasurer."

Work Was Done But Bills are "Illegal."

In the superintendent of the poor's accounts, the bookkeepers say there are "illegal payments" of $3,408.68; "illegal audits" of $937.71; "illegal" audits of $322.06. The "irregularly audited" bills were properly verified but not properly itemized. They consist principally of claims on account of labor in painting the buildings at the county poor farm. Other bills were irregular because not bearing the certificate of the state commission of prisons. The "illegal audits" include $153.86 for expenses "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors. The bookkeepers add: "The amount disbursed by the superintendent of the poor by check on the Huguenot National Bank is reported as having been illegally paid. Proof that such payments were made was shown by the production of cancelled checks drawn by the superintendent." Up to March 26, 1912, it appears these payments by Superintendent by check on the Huguenot National Bank were "legal," but an amendment to the Poor Law which took effect on that date made future payments "illegal."

Postage Stamps and Express Charges "Illegal."

The county treasurer's payments of $115.54 for miscellaneous expenses of his office are pronounced "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors. They represent payments for postage stamps and expressage principally.

"Illegal" to Pay Assistant Clerks.

After quoting the resolution passed by the board authorizing the clerk to employ assistants and appropriating $1,000 for their services, the bookkeepers say the payment to assistant clerks was "illegal." "No question is raised as to the right of the board of supervisors to provide for assistants of the clerk of the board of supervisors. But there is no authority in law for the creation of the fund with which to pay them."

County Clerk's Postage Stamps are "Illegal."

The sum of $255.17 to reimburse the county clerk "to reimburse him for expenditures for postage, expressage and other incidental expenses" is also pronounced "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors.

Copying Clerks Should Wait Year For Their Money.

The payments to clerks employed by the board of elections for copying names, which were audited by the committee on extra clerk hire for that year, also payments for postage used by the board in sending out the enrollment blanks required by an amendment to the primary law, are declared "illegal" because not audited by the entire board of supervisors.

The Supply Committee is "Illegal."

The bookkeepers next reach the payments made by the supply committee, which committee and its payments are discussed by the bookkeepers under the announcement that they are "illegal." The payments made by the committee during the year amount to $2,127.27. The pages discussing this committee bristle with the word "illegal," but the correctness of the amounts charged are not questioned. "In a former examination of the affairs of Ulster county," say the bookkeepers, "the question of the right of this committee to audit claims and order payment thereof was raised and a copy of the report of that examination has been in the custody of the treasurer since 1909." They say the payments have been made by the treasurer after ample notice of their "illegal" character, and the responsibility for payment rests on the treasurer. "All such payments are herein described as illegal," says the report.

"Because the Attorney General Says So."

The bookkeepers quote the section of the county law which authorizes the board of supervisors to appoint a board of county auditors, and submitted two questions to the attorney general.

The bookkeepers asked the attorney general if a board of supervisors could "legally" appoint its own members county auditors. He replied "that a body authorized by law to make an appointment cannot appoint one of its own members and that such an appointment is a nullity, and that it is contrary to the public policy of the law for an officer to use his official appointing powers to place himself in office."

Then they asked him if the county treasurer would be authorized to pay bills audited by county auditors so appointed, and he replied: "Your second question, it seems to me, is practically answered by the first for the reason that it is well settled that salary or compensation follows the true title to the office, and so far as any bills they might audit is concerned, if their appointment is a nullity, then, of course, their acts are of no force or effect."

Percentage to School Tax Collectors "Illegal."

The one per cent fees of collectors on returned school taxes audited by the board are classed as "illegal" because the law which formerly authorized them has been recently amended.

"Illegal" Headstones for Soldiers' Graves.

Because the board did not as a whole audit bills for headstones for soldiers, authorized by the law, amounting to $420, such payments are declared "illegal."

No Compensation When Committee Meets in Kingston.

The bookkeepers say next that bills amounting to $1,746.02 were not properly itemized and are "irregular audits." These bills, they say, "were principally those of county officials who had incurred expenses in the performance of their duties, and especially the bills rendered by members of the board of supervisors for committee work," and they say that bills amounting to $4,458.62 are "illegal audits," "for the reason that such services as may have been rendered by the said committee were so rendered at the city of Kingston and not five miles or more distant from the place where the sessions of the board are held." These items include the compensation, expenses and mileage of the committee on poor, committee on claims against the city of New York and committee on rights of way for state roads. The amounts paid to the committee on election accounts and supply committee are also declared "illegal."

The payment to the members of the insurance committee is not declared illegal, for the reason that they are and custody of county buildings is intrusted to the board of supervisors. (With regard to practically every other committee, the bookkeepers say the board has no right to delegate its authority to committees.)

The bookkeepers again emphasize their belief that committees doing their work in Kingston city should not be paid, when they discuss the committee on the claim of the county of Ulster against the city of New York. "What services could have been rendered the county by three members of the board attending the hearing of a difficult case before a referee does not readily appear," they say, but "Evidently the board thought such attendance necessary," for they allowed the members' bills for services, and "In addition two members of the committee, Schoonmaker and McElhorne, considered themselves entitled to 'expense' and 'mileage.'" The third member of the committee lived in Kingston.

Say They Found Five Duplicate Charges.

The bookkeepers say they found five charges by supervisors for committee work on two committees that met on the same day. These amounts are: W. S. Hartshorn, $4; Thomas J. Leonard, $4.32; William H. Kolts, $4.32; Charles A. Schermerhorn, $4; Philip Schantz, $4.

Report Bills "Illegal" on General Principles.

The bill of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran, say the bookkeepers, "on its face shows an attempt on the part of the claimant to comply with the law. The nature of his employment requires his presence in various parts of the county and he is entitled to be reimbursed for his actual and necessary disbursements. Except as shown below the bill is itemized, giving dates of payment, names of payees, and, except in the case of traveling expenses, the expenditures are supported by sub-vouchers. The charges contained in this bill and which are not properly itemized amount to $160.38. They represent charges for trips to Albany and to various parts of the county and while apparently not excessive, nevertheless do not in strictness comply with the requirements of the statute and are reported herein as having been irregularly audited. This bill also contains a charge for $27 for interest on moneys borrowed to pay expenses incurred. That item is not a county charge and is reported herein as having been illegally audited."

For similar reasons the bookkeepers say the following bills are "illegal":

County Sealer George W. Dumond—$15.71, $9.46 of which was for expenses in attending the state convention of county sealers at Albany, and including organization fee.

County Attorney Arthur E. Rose—$129.59, because not itemized as the bookkeepers thought it should be.

Minard W. Myer—$150 for materials used on highway on a state road.

Charles J. Post—$50 for engraving resolutions adopted on the death of the late County Judge Cantine.

Christopher K. Loughran—$647 for services as clerk to the supply committee for two years, the bookkeepers considering the supply committee "illegal."

John W. Eckert—$60 for services to the committee on preparing the county's claim against the city of New York.

James F. Loughran—$849 for automobile rental in traveling throughout the county in the performance of his duties as county superintendent. He should have hired a machine from someone else and not hired his own machine.

C. K. Loughran—$135 for automobile hire for committee on securing rights of way for state roads. No sub-vouchers.

Stuyvesant Garage—$279 for automobile for committee on right of way for state roads. No reason stated.

Telephones, at Least, Meet Approval.

The bookkeepers admit that "As business is conducted today telephone calls are so necessary, that without them in public offices the public would be greatly inconvenienced," and admit that "As part of the equipment of the county officials they are undoubtedly an expense the county is authorized to incur." They say they know of no statute which authorizes installation of telephones in private residences at the county's expense and it is "doubtful" as to the right of the board to pay telephone service in offices of county officials at places other than in the county building and where the officials' private business is being conducted. It is clearly "illegal" to pay toll charges except where the message relates to public business.

Because of their location in private residences and in Supervisor Schantz's office, the bookkeepers say the bills and toll charges of Mr. Schantz, Former County Attorney Rose, Under Sheriff McLaughlin, and County Superintendent Loughran, amounting to $231.19, are "illegal."

The remainder of this abstract of the report of the comptroller's clerk will appear in the next issue of The Freeman.

LISTS MAY BE AGAINST WAR

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, July 31.—The International Congress, representing 12,000 workers, may call an international strike of the mining and transportation industries in case of a European war, according to a statement made today.

The congress, which is bitterly opposed to war, feels that such a threat would cool the ardor of those who would, as a strike of this kind, tie up practically every railroad system on the continent and force the closing of every industrial plant in a short time because of a lack of coal and steel.

Further than this, the tying up of the railroad system would mean starvation for millions living inland dependent upon the railroads to bring them the largest portions of their food supplies.

When Germany and France were the verge of war two years ago, a similar threat on the part of the congress frightened the two governments into a peace agreement.

The congress meets here beginning August 8 and it is possible that the war situation became worse by that time, that the congress would issue an ultimatum to the powers "to stop war or we will call a strike within 48 hours."

The meeting of the congress originally was planned for August 23 in Vienna, but was shifted to the 8th of this city, so that the organization could take some means of halting the pending Austro-Serbian war.

Child Bitten by a Dog.

Thursday evening Max, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Pinkos, 38 Meadow street, was bitten in the arm by a dog said to be owned by a Polish family next door.

Mr. Weiner caught the dog after it had bitten his son and tied it up in the yard. This morning he notified police headquarters and this afternoon Policeman White went to the Weiner house.

Mr. Weiner refused to allow the officer to shoot the animal on his premises and paid Bill, a well known colored man in that vicinity, ten cents to take the dog to the city hall.

Bill started with the animal leading it by a rope and had only gone a short distance when the dog refused to move any further and Bill picked him up and carried him. Whether Bill made the trip to the hall carrying the dog the full distance is not known.

Mr. Weiner has had considerable misfortune lately. One of his sons is in the Kingston City Hospital in a serious condition from an operation brought on by the lad eating too many green apples the other day.

Merchant Arrested.

Charles J. Weiss, dealer in plumbing supplies at 68 Broadway, was arrested this afternoon at this place of business by Policeman White on a warrant issued in Catskill charging Mr. Weiss with petit larceny. It was impossible to learn this afternoon as to the particulars of the charge, but it is ascertained that the warrant was issued on the complaint of a Catskill man. Mr. Weiss is well known in this city and is a member of the board of education.

Bumped Cop Still Crippled.

Policeman William Reardon, who was injured in the cops-decoy baseball game last Saturday, is still unable to report for duty and will probably be off duty for the rest of the week. Reardon was injured when Dr. Clarke was sliding to second base and bumped into the policeman. The large tendon in the leg was severely wrenched by the accident.

GOVERNMENT WILL CARE FOR TOURISTS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, July 31.—"If necessary," said Counselor Lansing of the state department today, "this government will charter enough vessels to bring every citizen of the United States to this country." This statement was made in response to a question as to what steps the department would take to relieve the 100,000 American tourists now threatened with detention in Europe, owing to the suspension of the transatlantic steamship traffic due to the fear of international reprisals.

Why Wheat Prices Fell.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, July 31.—The refusal of exporters at the seaboard to ship wheat unless cash accompanied the consignment resulted in a break in prices on the board of trade today. Closing prices were in the neighborhood of 9 cents lower than yesterday's close. The Armour interests did much to restore confidence by offering to assist any firm which cared to avoid excessive margin calls. Corn and oats were also weakened by the break in wheat.

SERVIANS CHECK AUSTRIAN ADVANCE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Nish, Serbia, July 31.—Servian troops have repulsed the invading Austrians. Dispatches from Semendria to military headquarters here say that the Austro-Hungarian troops have failed to force the pass which would give access to the Morava valley and thus open a direct road to Nish.

Desperate fighting is going on at the pass. Servian artillery mounted on the hills has inflicted terrific losses on the attacking forces.

Lieut. Popovitch, who distinguished himself in the war with Turkey, was among the first Servians killed in the battle near Semendria.

Desperate fighting is going on today with heavy losses on both sides. Additional Austrian troops have come up to reinforce the regiments storming the Servian intrenchments about the pass.

Another victory for Servian arms is officially reported to have been won over the Austrians, who crossed the Drina river from Semendria. Two divisions of the invaders attempted to force the defile of Kovatch, which leads to Plevlje and Prijpolje but were beaten after an all day engagement.

Job Hedges Says:

"I believe in fewer laws and better ones. More vetoes and fewer apologies. Less legislation and more business. Fewer investigations and more things accomplished. The repeal of existing useless and ineffective laws and the enactment of new ones without delay. Less pursuit of alleged vice, and more practice of real virtue. Construction, not destruction."

"These few propositions will go far to give the state a sound, normal administration, and the people actual benefit. Corruption can be eliminated more effectively by executive insistence and quiet attention than by noisy promise. It is time for more action and less rhetorical pretense."

"To deceive the people by false phrase and mock them by pretended virtue is moral treason. It is time for men who pretend to speak for the people while talking for themselves, to act more for the people and think less of themselves."

"The day of political chicanery is passing and I hope claptrap will soon cease to be a party or an individual asset."

"The era of common sense, common honesty and restoration of the public to a normal state of mind is approaching."

The foregoing sentiment applies to advertising and business as well as politics. When we say that some very unusual price reductions on various household articles will be found in our Big August Sale, soon to be launched, you may depend upon that statement being borne out by truth and sincerity. Watch for our big advertisement.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Ty Cobb, of butcher soaking fame, seems to be headed in the general direction of his other years in fast company—the batting leadership of the American League.

Tyrus isn't slamming them out with the frequency of 1911-12-13 but, "there's a reason," the reason being that he doesn't have to. No one in the league just now shows any signs of finishing the year with .400 or anywhere near that total, so why should Ty unduly exert himself?

Tyrus has a habit of never trying to make a runaway race of the batting business. To lead and to let others follow, close enough to make things a bit interesting—that's Ty's method.

Before Josephus Jackson busted into the clubbing contest in the American League, Ty was content to club 'em out around .370, which was quite enough to give him the leadership. But, Josephus, after really getting under way, soaked the leather for .408 or so. And Ty—oh, he went .420. That was enough to beat Josephus in a convincing fashion. Had Jo gone to .500 it's quite likely that Ty would have taken notice of Joe's bet and raised his average to about .515 or .518.

Joe gave Ty another .400 battle and once again Ty was out—by just enough to make the victory decisive. Last year Ty batted only .390 or so. But it was enough, because Jackson dropped to .370.

This year Ty got away to a bad start, but in the past eight weeks, he has been hitting 'em again—just enough to get back to his old place at the top. His lead isn't large, but that isn't Ty's idea of batting close. He likes to keep competition close—and then breeze in under the October wire ahead by a fairly noticeable margin.

Ty has led the league seven years in a row. And this looks like number eight.

The National League is tooting George Burns, of the Giants, as an outfielder who ranks with the great American League quartet—Cobb, Jackson, Speaker and Milan. Burns is not as spectacular as the American Leaguers, but his averages this year show him to be considerable of an all-around outfielder.

Burns is batting well over .300 and his hitting is extremely timely. He seldom has failed to deliver in a pinch. Burns is a better thrower than Cobb or Jackson, is pulling as many wonderful fielding stunts as the great Speaker, is a whirlwind on bases, and best of all, seems to be without nerves and absolutely lacking in the temperamental stuff that detracts so much from the usefulness of stars.

Can Honus Wagner make it 18 years over the .300 mark? This is the question that agitates fandom just now almost as much as the one—who will participate in the world's series?

The fans all over the country are watching the game effort of the veteran to again reach .300 and of sticking there when he does. Honus started off at a fine clip and held well over .300 fairly in the season, but when the Pirates slumped, his batting did likewise. He went down to a mark around .250 before the skidding ceased. Since then he has boosted his mark to around .280—a few jumps away from .300.

Honus is playing his 18th year in fast company. In the other 17 years he never has failed to bat .300 or over—a record without parallel in baseball history.

A Los Angeles dispatch tells us that a fellow named Jim Jeffries said:

"If Jess Willard is matched to meet Jack Johnson I would like to train Jess. I feel that if properly trained, Jess can whip the negro."

The name of Jeffries sounds familiar, but just can't seem to place it at this moment.

Chris Mathewson of the Giants, is a sad example of what golf will do to an otherwise perfectly Christian-like gent.

Matty, as most everyone knows, does not play ball on Sunday. Such an act would conflict with his religious scruples. He made it a condition when he joined the Giants that he never was to participate in a Sunday game.

Hearing of Matty's stand, and admiring it, a St. Louis clergyman called at the Giants' hotel to congratulate Matty, when the Giants were in the Mound City recently. It was on Sunday.

"Mr. Mathewson is out, sir," the hotel clerk told the minister.

"Could you tell me, please, where I can find him?" asked the clergyman.

"Yep, he's out playing golf—his second round today," was the reply.

Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight, is an enigma to the fight fans. Pitted against a dub scrapper, Joe shows up like a world beater. He hits with terrific power, uses wonderful ring generalship, carries an almost invulnerable defense and is heady and cool at every stage of the fight.

But Joe, again—a champ or near

If at all Particular Drink

champ, is an entirely different person. He acts like a man in a daze. His blows lack steam, his generalship is a joke and his defense easily is penetrated. From a chain lightning performer against dubs Joe is changed to a ball and chain performer against class fighters. How do you explain it?

NEWBURGH WANTS BRIDGE.

Petition for Sleightsburgh Bridge Receives Many Signers.

Papers petitioning the state highway department to complete the construction of the state highway known as Route 3 by building a bridge over the Rondout creek at Sleightsburgh to this city are being widely circulated in Newburgh, by members of the automobile club of that city. The work is being done at the request of the Ulster County Automobile Club and Orange county residents are responding nobly. The petition is as follows:

"The undersigned, residents of the city of Newburgh and vicinity, members of the Chamber of Commerce, owners of automobiles and others are in favor of furthering the efforts made by the inhabitants of the city of Kingston, the towns of Esopus, Lloyd and Marlborough and all of us living on or contiguous to the state highway known as Route 3, do hereby endorse every effort made by them and add our names in support of this appeal, earnestly desiring that said road, known as the missing link, extending from the north line of the town of Lloyd to the southern terminus of the town of Esopus be constructed. Also that the bridge mentioned in section 120 of chapter 157, laws of 1912, be constructed so that a continuous route will result without delay to vehicles of all descriptions. We therefore appeal to you to use every endeavor to enforce the law providing for said state highway and bridge."

HANSON FAMILY TROUBLES.

Former Kingston Man's Actress Wife Makes Things Very Lively.

Walter L. Hanson, a former employee of the Allen-Kingston Automobile Company when its plant was located in this city, again figures in the limelight. Now his wife is suing his mother, Mrs. Aimee Lathrop Hanson, for $100,000 for alienation of her husband's affections. After leaving Kingston Hanson cut a wide swath in New York and married Henrietta Rautit, a vaudeville actress. Then his mother had him declared incompetent from excessive drinking and was appointed a committee of his person and estate. Hanson inherited $50,000 from the estate of his father. The suit for alienation is the latest step in the affair although friends have been contending for some time that the parties were reconciled. Mrs. Hanson, mother of Walter, is a niece of the late Mrs. Leland Stanford of California.
